Stocks Continue Rebound Economists Appeased

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's prediction that his policies will slow inflation and return the slumping economy to stable growth later this year buoyed some of the nation's business leaders Thursday.

Some of the encouragement from Nixon's pep talk to business and financial leaders appeared translated to the stock market, rebounding for the second straight day after falling to an eight-year low. The key Dow Jones industrial index advanced 20.95 points, an increase for the day of 3.15 per cent.

"I am greatly encouraged by the discussion and comments of the President and other members of the administration," said Chairman Robert O. Anderson of Atlantic Richfield Co., one of 42 business leaders at Wednesday night's 2½-hour dinner and talk session with Nixon at the White House.

Accounts of those who attended generally agreed Nixon said he was sticking by his basic policies of tight money, high interest and federal spending cuts to fight the nation's worst inflation in 20 years.

"He said that he still believed that the advice of his economists was reliable; that we'd see a turn in the economy by the third quarter of this year," said one corporation executive who declined use of his name.

Despite demands for wage-price controls to curb the continuing 6 per cent annual rate of inflation and alarm in some quarters over rising unemployment, the administration has continued to insist its stringent policies, although painful, would soon begin to slow price hikes and permit the gradual return to stable economic growth.

"The President really closed the door to formal wage and price controls," said John Bogle, president of Wellington Management Co. in Philadelphia.

Nixon also reportedly reassured those worried about his intervention in Cambodia that the action would shorten the war in Vietnam, eventually reducing the nation's defense spending.

"The other thing which he said I think was perhaps a little new was that the South Vietnamese army had proven itself and developed a new self-confidence, making the prospect of successful Vietnamization more likely," said one business leader who was at the dinner.

Some of the businessmen told Nixon they believe the Cambodian action was responsible for the recent sharp drop in the stock market.

To those worried about the effect of tight money supplies on the economy, Federal Reserve

Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns replied that the board is prepared to deal with any "liquidity crisis," but would not loosen credit restraints enough to spur new inflation.

Other administration officials followed up with a rash of statements supporting the President.

"Economic controls are not in the cards at all," said Secretary of Labor George P. Shultz in a San Francisco talk.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew told a Republican meeting in Huntington, N.Y., that Nixon's decision to "clean out the Cambodian sanctuaries" will be the turning point toward peace in Southeast Asia.

Charles E. Walker, undersecretary of the Treasury, said the economy's pangs are painful but necessary to slow inflation and restore stable growth.

"We're in the middle of a painful but absolutely necessary transition period from the ravages of an overheated economy," Walker said on NBC's "Today" show. "It took longer than we thought to cool off the economy," he said, but predicted an upturn in business the last half of this year when "the pain will begin to subside."

Business Strategy Set

HUNTINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said Thursday that the Nixon administration would avoid imposing wage-price controls in favor of continuing on "a responsible middle course of cooling inflation steadily and surely, mindful of the concerns of workers, investors and consumers."

He told a $50 a plate Republican luncheon that current economic problems stem from the Democratic Great Society. The Nixon administration, he said, proposed "to taper off inflation without the kind of recession that usually follows the kind of spree we were on in the sixties."

"We have not deluded the American people into thinking there was an easy way out of the problems we had been left," Agnew declared. "We have not run for the superficially attractive solution of wage-price controls, which no one would want one month after they had been put into effect."

The vice president predicted a business upturn in the second half of 1970, and continued:

"But even more important for business and for the nation, 1970 will be a turnaround year in Vietnam, when a President showed the world that the United States intends to remain a great power, a power with enough muscle to bring about a peace with honor."

Agnew said businessmen had made it clear to him that the Cambodian situation has been a major influence in the recent stock market slide.

Stock market prices advanced for the second straight day Thursday in the heaviest trading of the year.

The closely watched Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed up 20.95 at 684.15, an advance of 3.15 per cent.

Analysts said the most encouraging aspect of the continued sharp upturn was the exceptionally heavy volume.

He told his audience: "I don't claim to be an expert on the stock market but if I had to make a decision today on the basis of the chances for peace, I would feel 100 per cent more assured than I would have 30 days ago."

Agnew granted that the market was an accurate measure of investor confidence but said "it is also true that Wall Street is capable of overreacting in both directions."

The vice president noted that the market soared Wednesday, the day president Nixon was host to national business leaders at a White House dinner.

That's what it takes, Agnew quipped, "we'll feed them every night for a month."

The luncheon in this north shore community attracted 1,200 Republican supporters from Suffolk County, the easternmost section of Long Island.

About 300 demonstrators gathered outside, some in support of Agnew. Included were a band of hippie-type college students bent on putting the vice president on—they were peace symbols while waving signs that read "Spiro's our hero."

Also in the crowd were a score of construction workers in yellow hard hats, with placards reading, "USA all the way."

The hardhats exchanged taunts with youthful antiwar demonstrators, one of whom displayed a Viet Cong flag, while another carried an American flag upside down. Police kept the two groups apart.

Laborers Oppose Nixon War Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A small but increasingly vocal minority of union leaders is opposing AFL-CIO President George Meany's support of President Nixon's war policies in Vietnam and Cambodia.

"The AFL-CIO is not infallible, and many of us feel strongly that it is out of step with the thinking of the 13 million members it represents," says the 350,000-member Amalgamated Meat Cutters union.

"Our members, like all working people and like the majority of all Americans want peace. And they want peace now, without delay, without further military adventures, without more killing," says President Jacob Potofsky of the 400,000-member Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

These sentiments are echoed by several other union leaders whose followers add up to about 10 per cent of the labor federation's 13.6 million members in 122 labor unions.

In addition, the two largest unions, which are outside the AFL-CIO—the United Auto Workers with 1.6 million members and the Teamsters Union with 2 million—oppose Nixon on the war through their Alliance for Labor Action.

Aides of the 75-year-old Meany say that within the federation nothing has really changed; that Nixon's Cambodian intervention merely brought more public comment from the AFL-CIO's small corps of long-time war dissenters.

"I think I speak for nine-tenths of them," Meany said at a recent news conference when asked if his support of Nixon's war policies was representative of the labor federation.

Meany's position has extended through both Democratic and Republican administrations and is based on the premise that such matters should be entrusted to the President and that the

Allege Raid By U.S. Jets

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnamese charged Thursday that American B52 bombers attacked targets in the northern part of the demilitarized zone on the weekend, raising a "grave threat" to the Paris peace talks.

Hanoi delegate Nguyen Minh Vy told the 68th session of the deadlocked talks that the raids occurred May 24 and 25, causing damage and casualties in the North Vietnamese part of the demilitarized zone and in Quang Binh Province.

He said 46 groups of planes took part in the raids, including "several formations of B52s."

"If the United States continues to bomb the territory of the Democratic Republic of (North) Vietnam," Vy added, "our delegation will be obliged to draw the necessary conclusions. The United States will then bear the full responsibility for the consequences of its acts."

American negotiator Philip C. Habib did not reply to the North Vietnamese threat during the five-hour session.

U.S. delegation spokesman Stephen Ledogar neither confirmed nor denied that the raids took place, but he said the United States does not deploy B52 bombers over North Vietnam.

North Vietnamese spokesman Nguyen Tan Le refused to elaborate on Vy's threat or to indicate whether Hanoi planned a new boycott of the talks. The Hanoi delegation canceled the 64th session of the conference on May 6, after a series of American bombing raids on North Vietnam during the first four days of May.

The conference session produced no progress toward a settlement of the war. The two sides again accused each other of expanding the war across the entire Indochinese peninsula and refusing to negotiate.

Supply Line Control Attempted By Enemy

SAIGON (AP) — Enemy forces launched attacks east and north of the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh Thursday in an apparent attempt to obtain supply lines from Laos to make up for losses of bases to allied troops along the frontier.

Communist command forces battled their way into the streets of Prey Veng, a provincial capital 35 miles east of Phnom Penh, but were reported withdrawing later.

Some 40 miles to the north, North Vietnamese troops fought Cambodian forces at Prek Kak plantation, east of Kimpong Cham, and inflicted heavy casualties.

About 65 miles north of Phnom Penh, the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong overran the district capital of Tang Krasang, cutting Highway 6 for the first time. This isolated the provincial capital of Kompong Thom from Phnom Penh.

Official sources said captured documents indicated enemy forces would try to get a new line of communications from Laos along the Mekong River because of the U.S. and South Vietnamese thrusts into their bases just across the Vietnam border. These thrusts after also overrun infiltration corridors.

Elsewhere in Cambodia, enemy soldiers ambushed a U.S. artillery convoy near Mimot, in the Fishhook zone, killing two Americans.

To the northeast, American helicopters reported killing 32 North Vietnamese in an hour-long air to ground battle.

South Vietnamese forces were said to have killed 50 enemy soldiers around the Chup rubber plantation west of Mimot while suffering 14 wounded.

Cambodian and South Vietnamese forces joined up 10 miles east of Kompong Cham near the plantation, reopening the important route, Highway 7. A Cambodian field commander said the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese driven from the Chup plantation were retreating to the northwest.

The U.S. Command announced the loss of its 29th aircraft in the Cambodian offensive. It said a U.S. Air Force F4 fighter-bomber crashed 13 miles inside Cambodia while supporting South Vietnamese ground forces. The two crewmen were reported missing.

Although the cause of the crash was unknown, spokesmen said ground fire was reported in the region, which is across the border from Vietnam's southern central highlands.

In South Vietnam, enemy forces stepped up attacks in the northernmost provinces, killing five Americans and three government troops and wounding 14 Americans and 14 Vietnamese in four ground assaults. But the attackers paid heavily, losing 93 killed, field reports said.

All the South Vietnamese casualties occurred when 300 enemy soldiers fought their way to the barbed wire perimeter of a government fire base near the A Shau Valley, southwest of Hue. The attackers were thrown back after four hours and 74 of them were killed, spokesmen said.

Kopechne Inquest Details Released

BOSTON (AP) — The first telephone call charged to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's credit card last July 19, the morning after the death of Mary Jo Kopechne, was to the Hyannis Port home of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, court records showed Thursday.

The call was made from Chappaquiddick Island shortly after Kennedy reported the fatal accident to Edgartown police. It lasted 23 minutes and 54 seconds. It was made at 10:56 a.m. from Vineyard Haven.

The call was one of those listed by the New England Telephone Co. for the court inquest last January into Miss Kopechne's death. It was one of 33 exhibits entered at the inquest.

The telephone company records, however, do not show who made the calls, using Kennedy's credit card number, or who received the call at Hyannis Port.

The telephone records came to public attention Thursday, but they have been available "all along" since April 29, said Judge Wilfred J. Paquet of Suffolk Superior Court.

Four calls were charged to Kennedy on July 18, all before 7:42 p.m. Kennedy testified he drove his car off the bridge at Chappaquiddick some time after 11 p.m. the night of July 18.

The call to Hyannis Port was the first one charged to Kennedy after that.

Eleven other calls charged to Kennedy the day after the accident were not necessarily made by him, the telephone company said. They could have been made by anyone who knew his credit card numbers.

Testimony recorded during the January inquest was released April 29 along with Judge James A. Boyle's report saying he did not believe the senator's story that a wrong turn into a narrow island led to the accident. Judge Boyle said he believed Kennedy was negligent in his operation of the car.

Miss Kopechne was once a secretary to the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y. She was visiting the island for a cookout with several other workers for Robert Kennedy's presidential campaign.

The second credit card call made July 19 was to Kennedy's aide, David A. Burke in Virginia, lasting 21 seconds.

The senator's Hyannis Port home was called three times that afternoon. Conversations lasted 3 minutes 40 seconds, 10 minutes and 5 minutes, 23 seconds.

Two calls were made to Kennedy's Washington office, one lasting 55 seconds and the other two minutes.

A 59-second call was made to a telephone listed in the name of Mary Carroll, 2912 Olive Street, (Turn To Page Ten) (See "Kopechne")

Senator Blasts S. Viet Leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. J. W. Fulbright, describing South Vietnam's Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky as "an Asian Agnew," charged Thursday that Saigon's leaders are determined "to keep the Americans mired in the swamp" of Cambodia.

The Arkansas Democrat also contended that the Nixon administration "apparently intends to sustain an indefinite, full-scale military involvement

by proxy in Cambodia."

The Senate agreed meanwhile, to vote next Wednesday on an amendment expected to provide the first real test of strength in the debate on U.S. involvement in Cambodia, now in its third week.

The amendment by Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., would bar enforcement of the pending proposal to cut off funds for "retaining" U.S. troops in Cambodia until the Communists release all American prisoners in that country.

Although Fulbright indicated he will probably move to table and thus kill the Dole amendment on Wednesday, even a vote on that move would indicate the relative strength of the two sides.

Supporters of the funds cut off proposal, known as the Cooper-Church amendment, believe they hold a majority. This is a factor in the delaying tactics by pro-administration forces trying to hold off a vote on it until President Nixon has a chance to make good his promise to have all U.S. troops out of Cambodia by June 30.

Fulbright, however, noted that since Nixon's May 8 statement that South Vietnamese forces would be coming out about the time Americans did, officials have indicated U.S. air and logistics support would be available to South Vietnamese forces for operations in Cambodia.

"Step by step," Fulbright said, "the administration has hedged, backed off and now all but repudiated the President's confident prediction of South Vietnamese withdrawal."

meeting in Rome, Nixon said the allies had killed 7,911 enemy at a cost of 201 U.S. soldiers and 451 South Vietnamese killed in Cambodian operations.

Since then the claim for enemy killed has risen to 9,375. South Vietnamese headquarters said this figure includes four previously unannounced operations into Cambodia by government soldiers prior to the first officially disclosed thrust on April 29.

The latest allied casualty summaries list 225 U.S. and 511 South Vietnamese troops killed in Cambodian operations.

"To some degree the body count is based on estimates," one American officer acknowledges. "Especially when you are talking about jungles. There is no sure way to tell until you get ground forces in and often you don't."

Enemy Leads Toll Review Battle Deaths

SAIGON (AP) — If the figures can be believed, allied forces have killed a dozen enemy soldiers in Cambodia for every allied soldier lost. The allied command's claim of nearly 10,000 enemy dead is raising new doubts about the authenticity of such "body count" figures.

Some American officers say up to half the total is credited to bombers, helicopter gunships and artillery. The number of enemy officially reported killed is supposed to be based on an actual body count, but this is not always so.

In many cases, both air and ground observers estimate the number of enemy killed after a bombing or artillery strike in thick jungles or rugged terrain that ground troops never venture into. This leaves room for error, duplication and in some cases exaggeration by over-estimating troops anxious to make a good showing.

From the air, even if a body is sighted, there is the chance it is that of a peasant rather than a soldier.

By the same token, many killed or wounded by air and artillery strikes may never be known about or reported. When criticism of the body count was raised in the past officers argued that the various factors tended to equate.

In some cases eyewitness accounts of Cambodian operations have failed to back up claims of a large number of enemy troops killed in specific operations.

Newsmen accompanying South Vietnamese troops have reported only light contact on certain operations, but commu-niqués covering these operations told of up to 200 enemy killed.

Another seeming discrepancy is that while large numbers of enemy soldiers are claimed as killed, only a few weapons are reported captured after combat. Most of the more than 15,000 enemy weapons reported taken in the Cambodian offensive have come from caches turned up by allied troops without significant fighting.

When the American drive into Cambodia was announced President Nixon said the primary goal was the destruction of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong sanctuaries and base camps used for staging attacks into South Vietnam.

This week the President mentioned personnel losses. In a letter read to the opening session of a North Atlantic Council

Editorial Comment

The Cabinet Diminished

Not very long after Secretary of the Interior Walter I. Hickel sent his celebrated letter to President Nixon complaining that Cabinet members had a hard time getting to him, the President called a meeting of his Cabinet. They engaged in what Hickel later described as a productive discussion of current issues.

The greatest point of interest about this sequence of events is that a meeting of the Cabinet—not the substance of what was said, but the mere fact that the Cabinet met and talked of great national concerns—should be news. What is underscored is that the Cabinet and its individual members seem to have lost a considerable measure of their one-time influence on the chief executive.

This is not an entirely new development. President Johnson had, among other advisers with positions not provided for specifically in the Constitution or laws enacted by Congress, a special assistant in charge of national security matters. It was filled by Walt Rostow. President Nixon has carried it on, with Henry A. Kissinger serving in this capacity.

There is good reason to think that Kissinger, like Rostow before him, gets a reader hearing than Cabinet members. It appears, for example, that both Secretary of State Rogers and Secretary of Defense Laird had objections to the Cambodian incursion. Rogers deplored such a move in congressional testimony only a few days before the action was taken—taken, presumably, with Kissinger's advice and consent. It is clear that the Cabinet is playing a secondary role.

The dangers in this state of affairs are discussed by Sen. Eugene McCarthy, a 1968 aspirant for the Democratic presidential nomination, in McCall's magazine. McCarthy argues rather persuasively that "the use and the exaltation of special advisers will certainly confuse, if not weaken, the role of the Cabinet and, beyond that, of political parties, and could open the way to general political irresponsibility."

McCarthy, himself once a professor, does not downgrade the scholar's role in government. In his opinion, however, "the institutionalization of the expert, of the intellectual, as in the office of assistant to the President for national security affairs, threatens to destroy the independence of the academic community, which should always stand somewhat apart from the centers of power, freely seeking truth, defining and clarifying principle, and passing a critical judgment on those who hold political power and make political decisions."

Two points, here—that the Cabinet is diminished, and that the academic community's impartiality is hindered. Both are eminently worth reflection.

A Step Toward Warless World

On display at an air show in Hanover, West Germany, this month was a mockup of a Messerschmitt-Boelkow-Blohm jet trainer. On one side of the fuselage was painted the black cross of the German Air Force, on the other the red, white and blue rondel of the French Air Force.

The design is a German entry in a competition being held for a joint Franco-Germany "Eurotrainer" to be used by fliers of both countries.

There was a time—two times—in living memory when airplanes separately bearing the cross and the rondel symbolized a different kind of rivalry. The Germans and French have finally learned, at tragic cost, that Europe is really a very tiny place—too tiny to support any more wars—and that both of them have to live together in it in peace and co-operation.

If aircraft have taught us how small Europe is, spacecraft have shown us how small the world itself is. If that world is to endure, the day must come when the two powers whose symbols are a white star and a red star will have to learn the lesson of Europe.

China's Initiative In Indochina Has Russ Seething

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent
Soviet fury over Red China's initiatives in Indochina leaves the impression that the Russians feel they have been outsmarted and fear that Peking stands to be the long-term and perhaps only beneficiary of events in Cambodia.

Though they may glean consolation from the difficulties Cambodia has created for Washington, the Russians may look upon the turn of events in Indochina as a disaster of sorts for Moscow, too.

While the Kremlin hung back indecisively after the overthrow of Cambodia's Prince Norodom

Sihanouk, Peking acted swiftly to capitalize on the situation. The result as of now is that Peking has a large section of the Asian Communist movement—along with Sihanouk—echoing its cry for "protracted war."

If the American and South Vietnamese incursions into Cambodia happen to extend the war and make it less susceptible to solution by negotiations, that could be just what Peking wants. Perhaps the situation now really is less susceptible to political solution. Sihanouk is denouncing the suggestion, hinted at not long ago by the Russians, of a new Geneva-type conference on Indochina. The "protracted war" cry also seems to dim chances for any talks.

Sihanouk is acting as if Peking owned him. His speeches in Peking, the base of his government-in-exile, sound like a replay of Mao's as he pledges Cambodia to "protracted war."

Nations "who love freedom and justice," says Sihanouk, have recognized his government. This suggests that those failing to recognize him are no better than the "imperialists." The Russians and Soviet-camp nations have not recognized the exile government though Sihanouk has asked them to. It seems the Russians never trusted the mercurial Sihanouk and probably trust him even less now that he appears to be tucked into Mao's back pocket.

But Moscow wants to make points with Asia's Communists and thus may find itself forced to recognize Sihanouk. Russian diplomats then would have to leave Cambodia, perhaps not to return for a long time, while Sihanouk's allies carried out that "protracted war" with Peking's help.

Red China can consider it has little to lose by interminable guerrilla war in which it is not directly involved. It could reckon on that the losers would be the superpowers, who because of strains generated by such tension, are unable to agree on anything important and are pushed into a spiraling arms race. The superpowers must worry about the possibility of a mutually destructive conflict, but China, meanwhile, can pursue its goal of leading a "third world" revolution.

It is little wonder that Moscow exploded with frustration. Pravda's May 18 editorial of 7,000 words was a cry of pain and outrage, accusing Mao of trying to take over the whole "national liberation movement." Mao, it said, dreamed of a "great China that would rule at least Asia, if not the world." It said Maoism betrayed world revolution. It hinted Peking was leading the Indochina Communists to the sort of ruin experienced by the Indonesian party when its Chinese-backed try for a coup exploded in 1965.

The real source of Soviet frustration seems to lie in the reality of China's swift action and its gain of considerable leverage in Indochina. If the Americans get out of Cambodia, as they say they will, Sihanouk's "liberation" movement likely will seek to get up a head of steam with close Chinese support. Then, after all Moscow's years of painstaking and expensive support of Hanoi, the Chinese will have a good long-term chance of excluding the Russians, not only from North Vietnam but from Cambodia, Laos and perhaps elsewhere in Southeast Asia.

Big Gain For Nixon If Wallace Falls?

By BRUCE BISSAT
NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON (NEA) — The notion has surfaced among some top Democrats that if George Wallace should lose the Alabama governorship run off June 2, the ultimate net gain to President Nixon for 1972 might be far less than is often forecast.

In part this rests on a view, underscored by several observers, that Louisiana's Gov. John McKeithen might try to jump into Wallace's shoes and pick off at least two of the five Deep South states Wallace won in 1968.

Telephone checks with southern appraisers cast heavy doubt on the prospect of success for McKeithen in such a venture.

Sources there say there is no question he is interested. But the judgment, while constituting a terribly early projection, is that the Louisiana governor could not pull it off. Says one observer:

"He is no full-time crusader like Wallace. Moreover, he has been a loyalist Democrat and relatively moderate on the subject of race."

If there is any kind of consensus among the queried southern observers (and some others), it is then, that McKeithen lacks Wallace's missionary zeal, that he lacks the Alabamian's credentials as an antilynchist, and that, even if he had them, there are some influential people in his own state who would battle against their governor using Louisiana as a base for either a regional or a national political effort.

A veteran southern political analyst stands with the more conventional prior view that the Deep South states, plus Texas (lost by Nixon by only a point last time), would be "ripe plums" for the President's picking if George Wallace takes a bad fall.

More than just the South, however, is involved in the argument that a Wallace demise would produce small benefit for Nixon. In the four big northern industrial states the President captured narrowly, Wallace collected 487,000 votes in California, 467,000 in Ohio, 391,000 in Illinois and 262,000 in New Jersey. The convictions among key Democrats here is that, with the third-party candidate out of the picture, a high proportion of these votes would swing to the next Democratic nominee.

Many are properly assumed to be blue collar workers, though Wallace polled a surprisingly high rural vote in Ohio and some other northern states. Hubert Humphrey's late campaign rush was accomplished, indeed, by pulling thousands of blue collar workers back from Wallace.

If more such workers can be regained in 1972, obviously Nixon's position is threatened

No Democratic leader worth his salt wants to say now, 29 months before the next election, that the President surely is going to lose two, three or all of these four.

That would amount to forecasting that he likely will be beaten in 1972 no matter what pickup he may make in the South. Only a fool would go out on that limb.

Yet the specifics of Democratic argument take some leaders that way. In the foreground elections of 1970, they believe labor will be held on their side by a worsening economy, despite much rank-and-file restiveness over youthful campus disorders and the racial struggle. Some labor officials agree, even as they themselves deplore the troubles.

It is accepted that Nixon may find a way to turn the economy around well before 1972, but the high-level Democratic guessing seems to be he will not. Furthermore, men like Democratic National Chairman Lawrence O'Brien think there is a steady disintegration of confidence in the President's leadership generally—and they give no sign they expect this alleged erosion process to halt after the 1970 voting.

Ann Landers:

Communication Gap Deplored

Dear Ann Landers: There are so many sick boys and girls wandering around the country these days. The other afternoon while shopping in downtown San Francisco, I paused to talk to several haunted-looking children as they shuffled aimlessly along the streets.

I asked them why they left home. One said, "I got tired of the hassle with my folks." Another said, "Because it was time." A third replied, "To be free." Free to do what? To beg for money to buy food or liquor or drugs? Free to spend the night having sex without explaining why they didn't come home last night? Free to gang-shack in some lice-infested pad or in an abandoned house?

"Go home," you told the girl who wrote to say she had made a terrible mistake and was ashamed to face her family. How right you were, Ann! I wish that girl's letter and your answer could be printed on the front page of every newspaper in the country. I've seen a great deal of life and hard times but I cannot recall a period in our country's history when there was such a serious lack of understanding between the generations. How can we bridge the gap? What is the answer?—Mother

Dear Mother: I have no answer. But one continuous thread runs through all these sad stories. No communication. Parents who have established an open line of communication EARLY seem to have less trouble with their teen-agers. Some teens who exhibit far-out behavior are trying to show off for their peers. They want to be part of the group—accepted. But the runaway kids, the ones who can't stay in school or hold a job—the lost lambs who are bumming around the country seeking drugs and begging for handouts—are severely disturbed. They need psychiatric counseling for their sick minds and medical care for their sick bodies.

Dear Ann Landers: For a lady who gives advice you have a lot you have to learn. A recent column gave me and the girls I work with our biggest laugh of the year. Where did you get the crazy idea that "a gentleman never tells"? I know more about "gentlemen" than you do, seeing as how I've held hands with about 25,000 in these last 16 years. I'm a manicurist. Do you know the favorite subject of clients? Well, it ain't baseball, honey. It's women. And they aren't talking about their wives. To listen to these blabber-mouths, no woman ever said, "NO." I've heard some stories about prominent and fancy married ladies in this town that I wouldn't repeat to my best friend. What shocks me is the way these guys name names and places without giving the slightest thought to who might be under the towel in the next chair. It could be the husband of one of these dollies, for all they know.

Please, Ann, drop that line, "a gentleman never tells." They tell plenty.—Cuticle Clara

Dear Cutie: I still say a gentleman never tells. Those barber-shop big-mouths are not gentlemen. They are cheap gossips who are violating a very basic rule of manhood.

Confidential to Calamity Jane: The real calamity is your negative approach to everything. Instead of crying because the bottle is half empty, why not find joy in the fact the bottle is half full? You're not going to change the bottle but you can certainly change your outlook.

Law For Today

Q. Our teacher hasn't hit anybody yet but she often raises a ruler as though she would like to. Does the law allow a teacher to do any more than raise her voice?

A. Yes, within limits. A state law requires that teachers "maintain discipline in the schools," and places them "in the relation of parents and guardians to the pupils." Although the law does not elaborate on how such discipline should be maintained, the courts have held that when other methods fail, the teacher may use physical punishment that is not dealt out maliciously and does not seriously injure the child.

Alcatraz To Be Park Despite Indian Objection

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The federal government says it will make a park of Alcatraz Island, despite objections of Indians who have occupied the dismal 21-acres since last November.

The Interior Department said Wednesday—without any clue to a timetable—that it will create a Golden Gate National Recreation Area on the island.

It said the public park would "give particular emphasis and recognition to the contributions American Indians have made to the development of our country."

The Indians, who seized the island in a small-boat landing operation before dawn last Nov. 20, rejected the park idea more than a month ago.

They are expected to do it again formally at a tribal meeting Sunday, claiming once again that the island rightfully belongs to them.

Joe Morris, an Indian spokesman, said there was no change in the Indians' position that they want the island for an Indian educational and cultural center—a center they want to own as well as operate. They claim an 1868 treaty with the Sioux provides any unused federal land automatically reverts to the Indians.

Thomas E. Hannon, regional administrator of the General Services Administration, said Wednesday the title to Alcatraz was being transferred from the GSA to the Interior Department.

Thirty meetings between the Indians and government representatives failed to produce an agreement, Hannon said.

Hannon stressed government concern for safety of Indians on the island. A small fire occurred there Tuesday night. Water, sewage, heat and light all present problems.

Irish Officials Charged With Arms Conspiracy

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Two former government ministers fired earlier this month on suspicion of involvement in an arms smuggling plot, were arrested today and charged with conspiring to import arms.

They were released on bail of $2,400 each.

Both men had earlier denied any part in procuring illegally imported arms for the Catholics in Northern Ireland.

The two men are former Finance Minister Charles Haughey and Agriculture Minister Neil Blaney. Three other men were arrested Wednesday on charges of conspiring to import arms.

The dismissal of Haughey and Blaney on May 5 touched off a crisis for Prime Minister Jack Lynch's government, but Lynch managed to unite his Fianna Fail party and win two votes of confidence in the Irish Parliament.

The arrests of the two men appeared likely to inflame the emotional issue once again.

The reported arms plot struck at the heart of the most passionate political issue in Ireland, reunification of the Roman Catholic republic with the Protestant-dominated British province of Northern Ireland.

Lynch's moderate government favors talks toward ending Ireland's 50-year partition. Haughey and Blaney are among the militants who refuse to rule out the use of force to end partition.

City police investigated an accident at 9:08 a.m. Thursday at the intersection of N. Main and Walnut. Two southbound vehicles, a semi-trailer truck driven by Danny L. Barron of Congerville, Ill., and an auto driven by Dorothy H. Knight of Route 2, Virginia were attempting a right turn onto Walnut. Mrs. Knight said she didn't see the turn signal on the truck and was squeezed between the truck, also making a right turn, and the curb. The auto was towed away. No injuries resulted.

DISCUSS POLLUTIONBILL—Attorney General William Scott (l) and Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie (r) talk with reporters Tuesday about pollution legislation. Ogilvie called Scott "the most outstanding pollution fighter in the country." UPI Telephoto

Anti-Pollution Bills Approved By Senate Unit

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—The Illinois Senate Executive Committee unanimously approved Wednesday Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's sweeping environmental protection bills.

Democrats, however, complained that some portions of the bills were watered down by amendments.

Indignant that members of Ogilvie's staff, the attorney general's office and industry representatives dropped the amendments into the committee's lap at the last moment, Democratic leaders said they might seek changes in the bills on the floor.

Sen. Thomas A. McGloin of Chicago, Democratic minority leader, said:

"In the short time we have had to study the bill, we have found substantial changes—all changes that make control of pollution more difficult and decrease the power of the citizens to enforce their right to clean environment."

The committee defeated a motion by Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Belle-ville, to place the environment bills on the Senate floor in the same form they came from the House, without the Senate amendments.

Atty. Gen. William Scott said the bills with the Senate amendments would still give the state "the best and strongest anti-pollution legislation in the nation."

Scott said he had reservations

Hatfield Reimburses Postoffice In Free Mailing Privilege Abuse

By JOHN CHADWICK

the check hand delivered to an assistant postmaster general after the committee ruled in a rare action Wednesday he had violated franking regulations.

The matter may not be ended, however. The Senate Ethics Committee is reported looking into Hatfield's use of the free mail privilege as well as antiwar material mailed under the frank of Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

Hatfield said his check represented the cost of mailing 35,000 letters signed by antiwar leaders Sam Brown and Dave Hawk urging support of an amendment to end the war in Indochina.

An aide said Hatfield is hoping to recover the funds from $300,000 in contributions received in response to a May 12 television appeal he and other sponsors of the amendment made to build public support.

The Rules Committee in deciding Hatfield's franking privilege had been abused did not go into the question of reimbursement or who was at fault, an aide said.

Hatfield, who previously told the Senate the letter by Brown and Hawk was franked without his knowledge or consent, had asked the committee for a ruling.

The franking privilege is allotted to all members of Congress, the vice president and certain agents of the Congress. It allows them to place their signature on pieces of mail instead of stamps. This mailing privilege, granted also to the widows of former presidents, is paid for in regular appropriations by the Congress to the Post Office Department.

A Challenge For The Future

The Automobile: Our Greatest Polluter

By A. F. MAHAN
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Air pollution by the automobile isn't going to end tomorrow. Barring a major and unexpected breakthrough, it will continue a pollutant up to 1980 and possibly beyond.

But Dr. A.J. Haagen-Smit, a California scientist who first pinpointed the automobile as a contributor to smog, says there has been "tremendous progress" in lowering emissions and adds: "Now I can see daylight coming."

President Nixon has indicated the automobile as "our worst polluter of the air," and Ralph Nader, gadfly critic of the industry, complains neither the automakers nor the government is doing enough to clean up what he terms "our atmospheric sewer."

"Clean air" has become a battle cry within the political arena. Bills have been introduced in Congress and some state legislatures to outlaw the internal combustion engine, which now propels your car.

Edward N. Cole, president of General Motors Corp., insists the internal combustion engine "can be made essentially pollution free" by 1980, and estimates hydrocarbon emissions have been reduced 80 per cent and carbon monoxide 65 per cent since first control steps were taken in 1961.

Haagen-Smit, chairman of the California Air Resources Board and a faculty member at California Institute of Technology, agrees with Cole on both counts, although in the past he has, like Nader, accused the industry of foot-dragging until forced to take corrective steps.

Experts within the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) concede that over the next 10 years the conventional engine, with improved, unleaded fuels, catalysts and exhaust burning devices, likely can meet ever-tightening restrictions on pollutant emissions.

But the same HEW experts say it will be "one heck of a job" to reach pollution levels they contemplate for 1980 and beyond without some sort of new propulsion system.

What kind of engine then will power the near pollution-free car? Nuclear, steam, electric, natural gas, diesel or turbine?

A near-sure bet appears to be that added controls will add to the price of your car and likely to the price of the fuel it consumes.

Charles Heinen, chief engineer for emission control and chemical development at Chrysler, estimates the type of exhaust systems required to meet federal standards for 1975 may cost $200 to $300.

Refiners, who have promised unleaded gasoline will be available for 1971 models, estimate it will cost from one to five cents more per gallon than today's leaded premium grades.

But even if a breakthrough came today, and every car built from tomorrow forward were pollution free, the automobile would remain a polluter for years.

The reason: Old cars on the road.

The Automobile Manufacturers Association estimates today's U.S. automobile population, including trucks and buses, at 104.7 million. In 1968, the latest year for which figures are available, the AMA reported some 35 million cars and nine million trucks then in use were five or more years old.

The automobile is the No. 1 contributor to air pollution in total tonnage. No one challenges that. HEW figures show it contributes 86 million tons a year, compared with about 58 million tons from all other sources.

But when weighted by relative toxicity (poison), California's Air Resources Board reports other sources contribute more than five times as much. Millions of equivalent tons are: Other 21; automobile 4.

The automobile's major contributions to air pollution are invisible: hydrocarbons, carbon monoxide and oxides of nitrogen. Lead, while it has fouled control devices, is rated a minor pollutant at the moment.

The automobile's exhaust pipe is not its only source of pollution.

In uncontrolled, pre-1961 models, approximately 20 per cent of an automobile's polluting emissions were from the crankcase; 60 per cent from the exhaust system and another 20 per cent from carburetor and gas tank evaporation.

A crankcase valve cut off most of that 20 per cent in 1961 models in California; 1963 models nationwide. Exhaust control systems reduced the tailpipe's emission approximately 60 per cent in 1966 models in California; 1968 models nationwide.

The 1970 models being sold in California have controls to shut off carburetor and gasoline tank evaporation. Similar controls go on nationwide in 1972.

Unleaded gasoline, promise for 1971 models, will permit installation of catalytic and afterburner devices, to further reduce exhaust emissions. But whether any automaker will begin installing them then is uncertain.

Tooling up and plans for 1971s were locked-in months ago. But either catalysts or afterburners or both are likely on 1972s.

None of the automakers will disclose what amount of today's prices are chargeable to manufacturing costs and their investments in air pollution research and development.

But prices have been going up, and a rough idea of what control devices may be adding can be obtained from "optional" prices put on them in cars introduced in California before the devices became standard nationwide.

The first, to trap and recirculate unburned gases blown into the crankcase, had an "optional" price of $5. The second, involving changes in engines and carburetors and air injection, had a $45 "optional" tag. The third, stopping carburetor and tank evaporation, $35.

Nader has charged that the automakers will use air pollution control to impose what he holds would be "unjustifiable increases" in car prices. The automakers say it isn't so.

"We will have no hesitation in using a practical low-pollutant alternative to the internal combustion engine," says GM's Cole. "We are continuing to investigate alternative power sources aggressively and completely."

Cole, however, agrees with the view of Henry Ford II, Ford's chairman, that "further refinement of internal combustion engines and fuels is clearly the most promising route in our search for a low-emission vehicle."

Ford says flatly, and GM indicates, the gas turbine has been given top priority as a possible replacement. Both now are building and installing turbines in trucks, but Ford says "the problem of developing a turbine suitable for passenger car use is much more difficult."

Chrysler Corp. gave a low-emission turbine a whirl in its automobiles from 1963 to 1966, building 50 of them in a multi-million-dollar test program. Acceleration and fuel economy proved poor and there were other problems, including cost.

Chrysler finally scrubbed the program.

American Motors Corp. cooperated with inventor-industrialist William Lear in a recent attempt to develop a new steam-driven automobile. After "spending $4 million of my own money," Lear said he was abandoning the steam engine and turning to the turbine.

Both GM and Ford have built and tested electric powered automobiles in recent years, and both agree a breakthrough to lighter, more powerful batteries is necessary if electric cars become feasible for other than neighborhood shopping jaunts and golf course transportation.

The automakers insist "proper maintenance" can substantially lower an engine's emissions, and Prof. David E. Cole of the University of Michigan says a group of his engineering students proved the point in a tune-up clinic conducted during a nationwide "Environmental Teach-in" at the university.

HEW's budget is $5 million and it employs 989 persons for air pollution control. What GM, Ford, Chrysler and American Motors say they are devoting to this purpose exceeds $100 million a year. Industry manpower in this field is three times the government's.

GM says it anticipates its air-pollution research and development over the next three years will be at least $175 million. Nader, however, questions GM's past and present figures and insists it "is spending only about $15 million a year on anti-pollution research while it spends $250 million a year on advertising."

Dr. P.S. Myers, University of Wisconsin engineering professor and immediate past president of the Society of Automotive Engineers, estimates if a laboratory breakthrough to a pollution-ending device or to another source of power comes it likely will take three to five years to get the development into mass production.

And there would be an additional lag of four to seven years, Myers says, "before a sufficient fraction of the car population is equipped so that a noticeable reduction (in pollutants) occurs."

Nader insists a majority of automobiles coming off assembly lines today fail to live up to federal standards—and he is supported by findings of the National Air Pollution Control Administration.

He accuses the industry of misrepresenting control progress.

Ford's company replied the allegation was unfounded.

Haagen-Smit forecast that "pretty soon now" there will be assembly line testing of engines, which the industry once insisted would be too cumbersome, time consuming and costly. Bills have been introduced in Congress to require this.

Pressure for clean-up is also coming from the United Auto Workers Union and college campuses.

Louis Brandeis, appointed in 1916 by President Woodrow Wilson, was the first Jewish associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

THE DOCTOR SAYS Control Your Heartburn By Your Eating Habits

By Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D. I get a severe heartburn every time I drink coffee or orange juice or take aspirin. What can I do to get rid of all that acid and what can I take in place of aspirin?

A—If you don't have peptic ulcer or gall bladder disease, you should be able to control your heartburn by avoiding the things that you have found aggravate it — often greasy or highly spiced foods. Eat slowly. Chew your food thoroughly. Don't eat when you are under a nervous strain. If you do have a bout of heartburn, take one of the many antacids that are available. Those with coating action usually give the best results.

In place of aspirin, you could take acetaminophen (Tempra, Tylenol). Although no prescription is needed, this drug should not be taken regularly for more than 10 days.

Q—I had heartburn for 40 years and no doctor could help me. Then I found that if I drink black coffee, Sanka or tea without milk or cream every morning, I don't have heartburn. Perhaps this will help others.

A—One man's meat is another man's poison. In many persons with heartburn, cream will bring on an attack but skimmed milk can be taken freely and may even relieve it.

Q—Is it harmful in any way to eat baking powder?

A—Baking powder contains baking soda, cream of tartar, starch and sodium aluminum sulfate or calcium phosphate. I never heard of anyone eating it straight — must be an acquired taste. Small amounts would not be harmful, but anything can be poisonous if taken in too large a quantity.

Q—What causes regurgitation of stomach contents into mouth?

A—This may be caused by eating too fast, swallowing air, nervous tension or gall bladder disease. The food you retaste is not necessarily the cause of the trouble.

Q—What can be done for a person who has pellagra?

A—Since this is a vitamin deficiency disease, the victim should be given niacin until all signs of pellagra (skin rash, diarrhea, weakness and fatigue) have disappeared. After that, he should learn to eat a varied and well-balanced diet.

Please send your questions and comments to Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D., in care of this paper. While Dr. Brandstadt cannot answer individual letters, he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

YOUR BIRTHDAY and HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, MAY 29—Born today, you are one of those rare people who can find special significance in even the smallest manifestation of life. Nothing is too minute for you to find it of some importance in the general scheme of things—and this goes for people, too. Because of this attitude, you have never met anyone whom you have not been able to make a worthwhile friend of. Indeed, to you it is unthinkable that there should be any person anywhere who is not thought worthy by his fellow men.

You have a keen, alert mind—but you are less concerned with using it for display purposes, as do so many people of brilliance, than with using it for the betterment of the world around you. Not content with merely seeing what is wrong, you seek to understand the causes and to do something about them. You will not often succeed in your intention along these lines—but when you do, all efforts will have been worth it.

Although you are not at all inclined to sudden action or decision, when it comes to marriage you may well find yourself swept off your feet into a whirlwind relationship that leads quickly to the altar. Surprisingly enough, however, such a marriage may well prove highly successful, for you will work at marriage and bring to it all the affection and understanding needed.

To find what is in store for you tomorrow, select your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

Saturday, May 30

GEMINI (May 22-June 21)—Met the day's difficulties head-on and you shouldn't have to change your plans where family-type activities are concerned.

CANCER (June 22-July 23)—Take care that there is not something endangering your home that you could fight against if you would only recognize it.

LEO (July 24-Aug. 23)—Take immediate action against whatever threatens the unity of the family. Younger family members need attention.

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23)—Don't be put off if you discover that another is not as honest as you thought. You can adjust to the situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23)—Appearances do not really mirror what is inside. Others may not be what they seem; be on your guard against a plot to make you fail.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)—You cannot separate your life from your problems. Solve the latter and you will do much to set the former in order. A good day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22)—Don't think you can avoid whatever is unpleasant. Take the opportunity to improve a situation within the home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20)—Respect the advice of one who has proved he knows how to gain success without harming others along the way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—A day for airing family tensions. Let this Saturday be the day when the family seeks and finds new solidarity.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 21)—Contacts with others will be what you make them. Don't expect others to travel the full distance toward friendship by themselves.

ARIES (March 22-April 20)—Make your actions consistent with your personal principles and all should be well. Children are especially needy of advice today.

TAURUS (April 21-May 21)—Make every effort to overcome the shyness that may be keeping you from making the friends you wish to make. Step out boldly.

REITHER

on Beardstown

By Virgil Reither

BEARDSTOWN — Continued evidence of approval are reported by Robert Rankin, chairman for the Hospital Fund Drive here, in announcement of additional pledges toward the $600,000 goal which will constitute the local contribution to the $2.2 million dollar project.

Mr. Rankin said this weekend that the Beardstown medical group, which includes physicians, dentists, nurses and related professional people and firms, has pledged $76,000 to the fund.

This is the amount written to date, with additional pledges expected in this category of contributors.

Previously Oscar Mayer & Co. Foundation pledged $50,000 and the two local banks pledged $20,000 each.

Leo Reich, administrator at Schmitt Memorial hospital, also announced that employees at the institution have acted to give $22,000 toward the growing fund.

C. of C. Offices Closed

The Chamber of Commerce offices in the First State bank building will be closed for two weeks during the vacation of Mrs. Eva Lynn, secretary.

Chamber business will be conducted by President Herbert Darnell, president, who is superintendent of schools here, and who will be available at the high school.

New Bridge

A Springfield firm has been awarded a contract for construction of a bridge near Beardstown.

Sangamo Construction Company was awarded the job on a bid of $290,534 and will construct the span over Coal and Crane creeks, a fourth of a mile west of the intersection of routes 103 and 67 in Schuyler county.

The bridge will consist of steel plate beam girder and deck superstructure.

Youth Arrested

Sheriff Wubker said a "stake out" at the Ron Lockhart residence near Virginia resulted in the arrest of a Beardstown youth and the escape of another in connection with gas theft.

The sheriff had been watching at the scene for several nights, he said, and "caught two youths in the act" of stealing gasoline.

He said the arrested boy and the other suspect, aged about 15, would be arraigned when the case is completed.

Valuation Up

The assessed valuation for Cass county property has been announced as $68,212,658, an increase of $257,659 over the reported figure for 1968.

Total tax collected for last year was $2,552,230.56, up $93,562 over the previous year.

BIBLE SCHOOL IN MURRAYVILLE

MURRAYVILLE — The Wesleyan Service Guild of the United Methodist church held its May meeting at the home of Carol Milleson with Donna Heaton as co-hostess.

The meeting was opened by the president, Bernice Harvey. The worship service was by Darlene Gibson and the lesson on a Woman's Choice of Living Through her Problems, was presented by Martha Joseph and Eugenia Price.

The secretary and treasurer's report were read and approved. There will be a coffee hour in August for the Guild and WSCS societies to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the Cunningham Home, a Methodist home.

There will be a State Hospital party April 18.

It was decided to have the Vacation Bible school June 23 through the 28th in the evenings 7 to 9 p.m. All the family is invited this year.

The June meeting will be at the home of Darlene Gibson.

It was announced there would be a church picnic on June 28 including all the members in Murrayville Park. This is following the morning church service and a potluck dinner will be served at noon.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the hostesses.

President Appears At University Rally

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — President Nixon told a Billy Graham crusade Thursday night—with "stop the war" shouts in the background—that youth must turn to "those great spiritual resources which have made America what it is."

It was Nixon's first campus speech in almost a year, and the oval football stadium of the University of Tennessee overflowed with an audience estimated at 75,000.

The President stood through a long, loud standing ovation, smiling and nodding while the small group of dissidents chanted: "One-two, three, four, we don't want Nixon's war."

The answer came back in boos from the throng.

Evangelist Graham, Nixon said, told him there would be students on hand representing different points of view. "I'm just glad," he said, "there seems to be a rather solid majority on one side rather than the other side tonight."

That brought an outpouring of loud applause and a standing ovation.

At one point Nixon said: "I respect those who disagree with me." He said he was proud the great majority of America's young people do not approve of violence and, as he said he does, "do approve of dissent."

"But," he said, "they say they want the right to be heard and when they speak they think other people should be silent so that they can be heard."

"And so, it is a generation that is not the lost generation, is some Americans think. It isn't the best generation. It can be and will become the great young generation. That is what I believe and that is what you are going to make it become."

Nixon said everything about America isn't what he wants it to be, so he stated that he can understand why so many young people speak their desire for peace.

"I want that," he said. "You want it."

In introducing him, Graham called for Americans to support what he termed "the world's loneliest and toughest job." Graham had personally invited the Nixons to stop off on their way to their San Clemente, Calif., home for a Memorial Day weekend.

"We know that by your presence, you are once again reminding us that ours is a crisis of the spirit—and that only the spirit of God can heal us and bring us together."

Graham said many presidents before Nixon had made unpopular decisions. Then he added: "The American presidency is the world's loneliest and toughest job. All Americans may not agree with the decisions a president makes—but he is our president. He is the president of the blacks as well as the whites. Every president deserves the sympathy, understanding and prayers of the American people."

The crowd was the largest ever to jam into Neyland Stadium, which has a capacity of 64,429. A university official said more than 12,000 were turned away before the gates were closed.

The presidential motorcade was greeted by hundreds of persons gathered along the 15-mile highway stretch between McGhee Tyson airport and Knoxville. The throng of onlookers stretched for more than two miles.

At one point, the motorcade opped and Nixon aides tried to lower the convertible top, but couldn't. The President and Mrs. Nixon got out of the car and began shaking hands with the group.

John Robert Smith, president of University of Tennessee students, met briefly with Nixon. The President told Smith he would meet with him and other students aboard the presidential aircraft before leaving for California.

Before the service began, dissident students shouted "Peace now!" prompting the choir to break into "God Bless America."

Rogers Hopeful Of Continued Bases In Spain

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers said Thursday substantial progress had been made in talks on renewing the U.S. military bases agreement with Spain.

"I hope my visit here will help move us to an early conclusion," Rogers said on arriving in Madrid for talks with the Spanish government.

In an airport statement Rogers said the main purpose of his visit was to confer with officials on the bases.

He flew in from Rome where he attended the North Atlantic Treaty Organization foreign ministers meetings. He will brief officials on the NATO meeting. Spain is not a member of NATO.

U.S. officials oppose to continuing U.S. military bases in Spain bubbled up ahead of Rogers' arrival.

Leftists scattered leaflets saying "Yankees get out of Spain."

'New' Graduate Appointed As College Dean

WEST DE PERE, Wis. (AP) — Just 72 hours after Patricia Ponto, 21, received her diploma at St. Norbert College she was hired as the school's dean of women.

A straight "A" student in sociology at the 1,600-student coeducational liberal arts college, Miss Ponto says she has always wanted to be a counselor and was aiming for that type of graduate work.

But, "a crazy thing" happened.

She was named to a committee to screen applicants for the post of dean of women to succeed Miss Carolyn Schreiner who resigned for personal reasons. And some of her friends on the committee talked her into applying for the job herself, she says.

So she wrote a brief letter of application to the committee, but not telling much about herself.

"Everyone on the committee knew me anyway," Miss Ponto explained. "What I said, in effect, was 'you know me—decide.'"

The committee endorsed her and she got the job Wednesday, becoming one of the nation's youngest dean of women.

"I was surprised, really pleased," she said.

The new dean expects that her age will be an asset, but also, perhaps, something of a problem.

"I know what kids are thinking now and I'll be able to represent students. My appointment is the best evidence that the administration here is making the students its number one concern."

"Naturally there will be people here who won't be pleased. They'll demand that I prove myself, but I think once they see what I am doing it will be o.k."

But there's just one thing, she added: "The students better not call me Miss Ponto."

"I hope it won't be necessary for me to be a disciplinarian," she said. "There's a trend to separate counseling and disciplining, and I hope that will some day become a reality here."

St. Norbert, an institution operated by the Norbertine Order of the Roman Catholic Church, has had no campus disorder. An all-night rally and a march was staged at the time of the killing of four students at Kent State University.

Truck Strike Still Unresolved In Chicago Area

CHICAGO (AP) — A meeting Thursday between negotiators for truck drivers and cartage firms broke off without reaching an agreement.

A federal mediator, J. Curtis Counts, said the two sides would meet again at noon Monday. He declined to comment on the talks, the first held in more than a month to try to end a combination strike-lockout that has idled some 40,000 drivers since it began 50 days ago.

The meeting Thursday was requested by George P. Schultz, secretary of labor, who said earlier this week the dispute is "a matter of serious concern" to the Nixon administration. Counts flew in from Washington to mediate.

Members of Teamsters Union locals in the Chicago area and Gary, Ind., and the Chicago Independent Truck Drivers Union are demanding a wage hike of $1.65 an hour over three years.

A national contract reached earlier this month in Washington provides drivers with a wage increase of $1.10 an hour spread over 39 months.

The seven-week dispute has resulted in some $800 million in losses to Chicago area business. Payroll losses to workers amount to an estimated $5 million a day, industry officials say.

THE MARTYRED PRIEST

NEW YORK (AP) — "His was a loud cry for justice. He was an unheard-of case... Camilo has not died. He is the symbol of the new America. With him hope is born."

So writes German Guzman in a new book published by Sheed and Ward, "Camilo Torres," a biography of the young Colombian priest who joined a guerrilla movement, was killed by government troops in 1966, and who has become a symbol for radical reformers around the world.

IT'S BARELY POSSIBLE that "Seandy" is imitating human litterbugs in this little charade. Photographed in New York's Central Park zoo, the 5-year-old, 700-pound polar bear seems to be drinking from a beer keg and then tossing it aside. Could he be called a "polar polluter"?

Ceylon Election Prompts Change In Government

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP) — Sirimavo Bandaranaike was asked officially Thursday to form a new government, one day after her leftist coalition swept to a landslide victory in Ceylon's parliamentary elections.

Gov. Gen. William Gopallawa wrote to the 53-year-old widow, who became the world's first woman prime minister when she headed Ceylon's government from 1960-65, after receiving the resignation of Conservative Prime Minister Dudley Senanayake.

A government spokesman said Mrs. Bandaranaike had not said when she would present her Cabinet to the governor general, but there was a strong possibility she would assume power Friday.

The government of Mrs. Bandaranaike, whose husband Solomon Bandaranaike was assassinated in 1959 while serving as prime minister, will have the largest parliamentary majority in Ceylon's 21 years of independence. It is expected to bring a strong swing to the left. She has pledged a new round of nationalizations and already has singled out eight foreign banks and the country's import-export trade for government takeover.

During her first term of office, Mrs. Bandaranaike took over private and religious schools in Ceylon and nationalized the life insurance business and oil distribution industry.

Her five years in power ended when she was defeated in Parliament as a result of her efforts to nationalize the press. Newspapers that supported Senanayake now are predicting cutbacks in their government advertising and newsprint quotas.

PARIS POLICE RIOTERS CLASH

PARIS (AP) — Paris police reported 81 of their men injured in clashes with young rioters in the Latin Quarter Wednesday night and braced for more of the same tonight.

The youths burned cars and set up two barricades in retaliation for the government's ordering the dissolution of the Proletarian Left, a Maoist organization.

There was no word on how many of the rioters were injured, but 490 youths were taken to police headquarters for "verification of their situation."

Police released all but 16 of the demonstrators. They were charged with outrage toward policemen, rebellion and malicious mischief.

The government ban on the Proletarian Left came during the afternoon-long trial of two editors of the group's newsletter on charges of crimes against the security of the state and incitement to murder, pillage and arson.

STEINBERG RECOVERED

PITTSBURGH (AP) — William Steinberg, 71, fully recovered from an illness for which he was hospitalized in January, returned to conduct the Pittsburgh Symphony in two of its three final programs of the season.

Steinberg, who is music director for both the Pittsburgh and Boston Symphony orchestras, will conduct both during the summer. He will conduct the three opening concerts of the Temple University Music Festival in Ambler, Pa., where the Pittsburgh Symphony will be in residence for six weeks. And at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, he will conduct the Boston Symphony in six summer concerts honoring the 200th anniversary of the birth of Beethoven.

Black Policemen Face Variety Of Pressures

EDITOR'S NOTE—More and more blacks have joined the nation's police forces. More and more have risen to high position. But while things are better than ever before, the black cop's position is a difficult one—with heavy pressures bearing on him from both white and black communities. Here is a report on how he feels about his job.

By ARTHUR EVERETT
Associated Press Writer

His uniform is the same shade of blue, the metal of his badge the same quality. But when a policeman's skin is black, his problems tend to multiply. Often, he is the man most in the middle—either because of his color or his badge.

"The department reflects the same social conditions that are presently common," says Capt. W. Lawson, one of 21 Negro officers on Seattle's 1,000-man police force. He is a 20-year veteran.

"When black officers join the force," he continued, "they know they will be singled out by black militants. The vast majority of black officers take it in stride. The militants are doing their thing and I'm doing my thing and we both understand each other."

Bob Ingram, 33, a sergeant named last January as Miami's "Policeman of the Year." His godfather was the city's first Negro officer and was shot to death while on duty. A bearded father of two, Ingram responded to an Associated Press sampling of the status of the black policeman:

"I have it easier than he did, but it's still no Sunday school picnic."

"In white neighborhoods, they call 'nigger' at me. Around the ghetto it's rose-unprintable stuff. Anyone who yells those things needs help, baby, not a punch in the mouth."

"I'm the first to admit that black persons gripe about treatment from black officers at least as much as they complain about white policemen."

"The black man out there in the ghetto has a poor image of police. It stems from the old days when officers would slap anybody on his tail that got cut with them. They were hired for brawn, not brains. They sometimes had muscles between their ears, too."

Some Negro cops tend to hold their uniform or badge, rather than the color of their skin, responsible for attitudes they encounter among fellow blacks. An Atlanta vice squad detective, Lt. J. H. Amos, who began as a patrolman in 1957, said of racial disturbances: "Those people don't give a damn what color you are. If you're a policeman, they're going to rock you."

Milwaukee has 2,000 policemen, 53 of them Negro. One of the latter, who asked that his name not be used, is a plain clothesman. Speaking of the slums he said:

"The uniform is tabu, no matter what color you are. Any animosity is aimed at 'whitey,' and whitey's uniform, for what it represents. . . But I stay up with the times. And I stay clean. The brothers know I'm a policeman, but they respect me because of the way I look and the way I act towards them. They know I'm also fair."

"There's a portion of the kids, though, that no matter what you look like, as long as you're 'the man' you ain't worth a damn. I'd say about 75 per cent of the blacks are propulsive and about 25 per cent are against. With the 25 per cent, there has been some reason for them to adopt this attitude."

"Years ago, it was the grown-ups who hated you, but now it's the kids, the little kids, 5 and 10 years old," said Arthur Jackson, 48, a Chicago policeman. "You've got to be flexible, like a whip or a tree. You've got to bend. So, they call you a name, so what?"

What lures blacks into uniforms then? And what keeps them there?

James Roberson, 28, is one of five black officers among 197 men on the Pasadena, Calif., force. A lean and amiable man, who wears an Afro haircut and often appears in the station house in a loose-fitting African shirt known as a dashiki, he is interested in improving the image of the Negro cop among members of his race.

As he put it: "You can help you fellow black more than you ever could as a street corner militant. Before we've always been just good mercenaries—niggers defending the white power structure. Now we're saying we're black men first and cops second."

Fred Williams, a 6-foot, 280-pound patrolman has been with the Detroit Police Department for 16 years.

"The black ghetto's salvation is for aware black men to get into law enforcement. . . Most black people are not opposed to law, but are opposed to the way it is being applied," Williams said.

Some black policemen find a racial gap between black and white cops, plus what they regard as discrimination in promotion. Said one after three years on the police force of a Southern city:

"There is no communication between white officers and black officers. You come to the watch room in the morning, some speak, some don't even speak. . . They have this oral exam, that they use to eliminate whoever they want to. One guy made 100 in the written exam, but didn't pass the oral exam."

The upper West Side is the beat of a disgruntled New York City patrolman, who asked that he not be identified by name. He is 35, a nine-year veteran, tall, well-proportioned, with a mustache and long but impeccably trimmed hair.

"The job of the Police Department is to maintain the status quo," he declared. "The police force is the arm of the establishment."

Like others, he senses what he

NEW YORK (AP) — Advertising agency executives appear unperturbed over the prospect of losing millions of dollars in billings because of a new law banning cigarette commercials.

"It's not the black cloud it would appear to be," said one agency executive of the ban on cigarette advertising on television which takes effect Jan. 2.

Tobacco companies in 1969 spent some $270 million advertising cigarettes in television, radio, magazines and newspapers. Of that sum, $214 million, or 79 per cent, went for television and radio.

What makes a big cutback almost inevitable is that the cigarette industry is reluctant to pump a lot more funds into newspapers and magazines.

William Kloepper, a vice president of the Tobacco Institute, says the tobacco companies are fearful that if they flood periodicals with ads, the Federal Trade Commission might compel manufacturers to insert a health warning in all its print advertising.

And tobacco companies don't want to be in the position of spending money to disparage their own products, he said.

Agencies say they're not sure exactly how much in billings they'll lose. Clients generally don't reveal their advertising budgets for the next year until the preceding September.

But agency estimates in the drop in billings per brand will range anywhere from 30 to 60 per cent.

"Most agencies aren't going to suffer too much because cigarettes don't account for a high percentage of total billings," said Victor G. Bloede, president of Benton & Bowles, one of the major New York agencies.

Bloede, whose agency last year severed its relationship with the $15-million Kent cigarette account, said, "We didn't let anybody go. Fortunately we got some new business at that time."

Manhattan's William Esty Co. drew approximately 30 per cent of its total billings of $156 million from television and radio ads for Winston and Salem, according to trade reports.

An Esty spokesman said, "We'll still be a $140-million agency after the cigarette commercials go off the air."

And an advertising executive who works on a cigarette account said he wouldn't expect a big impact at his agency from the prohibition on commercials.

"The handwriting has been on the wall for a year," he said. "There has been a lot of planning for the transition at both the client and agency."

He added: "Suppose the worst should happen and for reasons beyond your professional competence, you did get fired. You'd have no trouble getting another job. There's no great difference between selling cigarettes and selling soaps. The expertise required for marketing packaged goods is pretty much the same, regardless of the product."

John Cunniff is on vacation.

Soybeans, Wheat Down Fractions

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybeans futures prices sagged 1 cent or more and wheat lost major fractions in an up-and-down trading session Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Trading began with general advances in all major commodities, attributed to confidence born of a record stock market performance Wednesday.

Commercial liquidation, profit taking and a waning buying interest halted the upturn in midsession. Ensuing losses were trimmed late in the session but traders, carrying out commitments before the long holiday weekend, simply let interest.

July soybeans rose to a seasonal high, $2.72 1/2, before the downturn that dropped it 1 cent below the previous close.

At the close of trading, wheat was 1/2 cent lower, July 1.34 1/2; corn was unchanged to 1/4 higher, July 1.29 1/2; oats were unchanged to 1/4 lower, July 65; rye was 1/4 lower, July 1.07, and soybeans were 1 to 1 1/4 cents lower, July 2.71 1/4.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices continued their sharp upswing Thursday in the heaviest trading of the year.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed up 20.95 or 3.15 per cent at 684.15.

Volume on both the New York and American Stock Exchanges was the heaviest for the year.

Big Board turnover was 18.91 million shares, up from Wednesday's 17.44 million. The New York Stock Exchange tape was running one minute late at the close.

On the Amex, volume was 6.82 million, compared with the 5.39 million traded Wednesday.

Big Board prices opened strong, pushing the Dow Average up more than 18 points in the first hour. Midsession profit taking lopped 7 points off these earlier gains, but late buying sent the average surging back up again.

The strong showing came on the heels of Wednesday's rally, which propelled the Dow average to its largest single-day gain in history.

Some analysts said the upswing was due to technical factors, pointing out that the basic fundamentals that hampered the market to its recent lows remained unchanged.

Others, however, said the upturn could be the beginning of the end of the current market slump.

"I think you've seen the bottom," said Charles M. Lewis, a partner in Treves & Co.

He said White House reassurances given to business leaders at a Washington dinner Wednesday night were a major factor in the present market upturn.

Advances led declines by 1.21 to 2.71, with 145 stocks remaining unchanged. There were 77 new lows and 3 new highs.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was up 6.2 to 237.8, with industrials up 10.0, rails up 3.7, end utilities up 1.5.

Stocks were higher in all categories.

There were 85 blocks of 10,000 shares or over traded, compared to 76 on Wednesday.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange were also sharply higher. The Amex price change index closed up 0.40 at 20.36.

Presbyterians Ask End To War

CHICAGO (AP) — Delegates representing the 3.2-million-member Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. have called for an end to American involvement in the war in Southeast Asia on grounds that Congress never declared war on North Vietnam.

A resolution passed Wednesday by the church's 182nd General Assembly urged adoption of "a specific timetable for the termination of the American commitment" in Indochina.

As passed, the resolution softened considerably an earlier draft which recommended the assembly "strongly condemn the invasion of Cambodia as an unjustified and dangerous extension of an already illegal war."

The Vietnam statement was the final action taken in the weeklong meeting of 800 delegates.

GUARDSMEN CLASH WITH OHIO U. STUDENTS

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — National Guardsmen and police clashed with rock and bottle-throwing demonstrators in the Ohio State University area early today, but the confrontation ended abruptly when authorities boxed in the youths and sent them fleeing through private yards to refuge.

No tear gas was used. About 30 persons were arrested, most on charges of refusing to disperse.

The only injuries were bruises to several guardsmen hit by flying missiles.

The incident began when about 400 students who had gathered on the campus were ordered to disperse because of a midnight campus curfew.

FILES POLLUTION SUIT

MORRISON, Ill. (AP) — Atty. Gen. William J. Scott has asked for a temporary injunction to restrain Northwestern Steel and Wire Co., of Sterling from emitting noxious fumes, smoke and gas.

Scott filed suit Wednesday in Circuit Court in Morrison against Northwestern, a manufacturer of electrical furnaces.

Blount Says News Media Bias Prompts Divided Cabinet Image

By MARK BROWN
WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster General Winton M. Blount says talk about a divided Nixon cabinet is "a lot of malarkey" by a news media biased against the administration.

"They are strong individual people," Blount said of his nine colleagues who with himself, make up President Nixon's Cabinet.

"That doesn't mean at all that sometimes we don't hold different opinions, but to say this is a divided cabinet—that's just a lot of foolishness."

Blount said in an interview the news media has inaccurately pictured the cabinet as sharply divided over Cambodia and placed an "extreme overemphasis" on speeches by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew while underplaying demonstrations of support for the President's war policies.

He also contended the Nixon administration has not only listened to young people, but has done a great deal for them in the way of draft reform and efforts to seek limitations of nuclear weapons.

Blount, a staunch supporter of Nixon's Cambodian policy, said the administration has an obligation to explain its decisions about Indochina to young people, whose "depth of feeling is extremely impressive." But he added:

"If the decision goes against you, you can't say, 'they didn't listen to me because they didn't do what I wanted.'"

Turning to news coverage, Blount said "the role of the media is to dig for information for its readers. Generally, I think it does a fine job."

But when the media covers the administration, he said, "it seems to tip the balance wheel a little. It begins to let its bias show."

One example, Blount said, is "the extreme overemphasis by the media on the vice president's speeches... it doesn't seem to want to take things in context."

"The vice president's main criticism of the media is of lack of balance," he said. "But the media rants and raves when the vice president makes a speech."

"I must say I've heard much worse things in the media about the vice president than he has said about the media," Blount said.

Another indication of bias in the news media, he said, was the relative coverage of the antiwar rally in Washington and the peaceful march by New York construction workers in support of the President's policy.

"I must say I don't feel these things are similar in the view of the media," Blount said. "When 50,000 to 75,000 people had the rally at the Elipse, we read about it all week. But when 100,000 to 200,000 construction workers marched in New York, the newspapers treated it rather casually."

Ruby Describes Indy Excitement

EDITORS NOTE: Lloyd Ruby, who goes into his 11th Indianapolis 500-mile auto race Saturday, describes the excitement he feels during the race in the fourth of a series of five articles written for the Associated Press. In the final article, he will discuss his future plans.)

By LLOYD RUBY
Written for The Associated Press
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — (AP) Saturday will be the 11th time I've started the Indy 500. It's the greatest event in racing... the biggest challenge.
This is my twentieth year as a driver, and I enjoy running the 500 more than all the other races put together.
The crowd, and everything else surrounding the race, really gets you going. I guess football coaches call it getting fired-up. I'll guarantee you when Tony Hulman says "Gentlemen, start your engines," the old heart will be running flat-out already.
It's hard to describe the tremendous feeling you get in the race. It's better'n hooking a 10-pound bass on a lazy day. Next to racing, I think fishing is the greatest thrill in the world, when they're biting. You feel like there's more to run for at Indy. Aside from the money, the crowd affects everybody makes you run harder. I don't think anybody would feel like running 500 miles at the speed you have to run here if there were only three or four thousand people watching.
Lotsa people have asked me what I think about during the race itself. Well, the race itself takes all of your attention and you don't have time to think about anything else. I try to keep my mind on the track and what kind of shape it's in. I think about how hard I've got to run to catch up to the leaders. If I'm running in front I think about how to stay there. I don't like to abuse my equipment.
If you have to abuse yourself and your equipment, you're cutting down your odds of finishing the race, much less winning it. For about three hours, you're trying to out-think the other drivers, trying to out-run them.
I hope about four of the guys who are starting up there ahead of me will race each other hard right from the start. I believe in odds, and the odds are that at least three of those four won't finish.
They'll be abusing their equipment and taking more chances than they have to. When you're racing somebody hard, you're naturally wearing your equipment more. You're putting more stress and strain on everything, the engine, the chassis, the tires, every part and piece.
I think the Mongoose I drive, built by my chief mechanic, Dave Laycock, is the strongest car I've seen or driven. How did we get the name Mongoose? Well, several years ago, everybody started naming their chassis after animals. Dave figured a Mongoose had to be the fastest thing in the world. It even whips up on rattlesnakes.
With Dave's ability, I have tremendous confidence in my car. The first two races we ran this year, I was involved in two pretty good accidents but I managed to finish both — with pretty good results. I was third at Phoenix and first at Trenton. I slammed into Art Pollard at Phoenix and ran up over a car at Trenton. Both times, I really banged it around. Most cars would have broken something, hitting as hard as I did, but these two bumps didn't even bend the car.
I don't have any worries in a race wondering if something is going to break... I know some drivers do and that can be a big factor in a driver's mind.
Let me tell you, a driver has enough to think about when he's racing without having to worry about whether something is going to fall off the car.

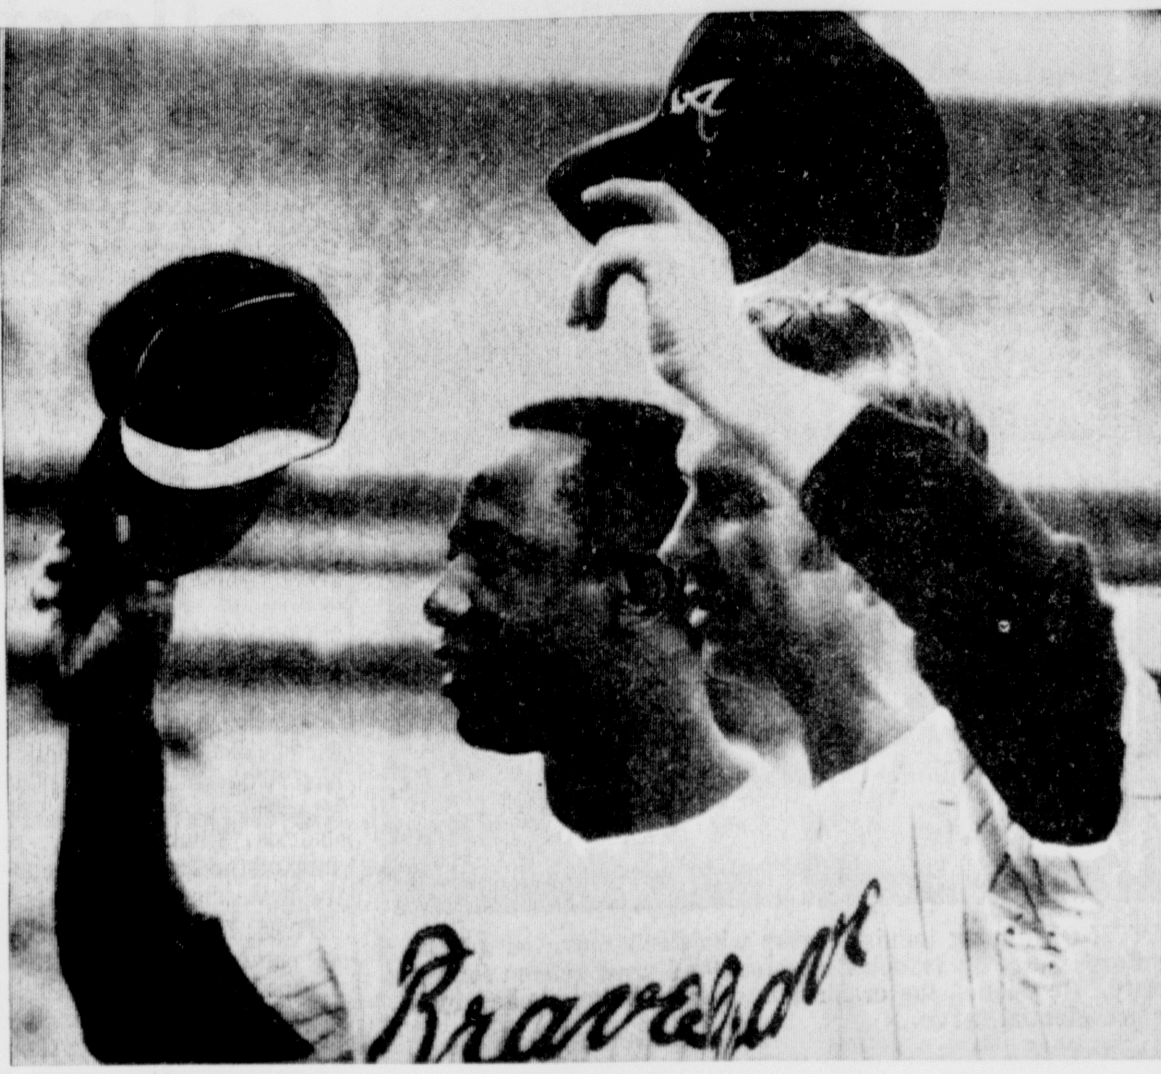

Hill Takes Early Lead At Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Brash Dave Hill ripped seven strokes off par in a string of six holes Thursday and charged into the first round lead in the $150,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Open golf tournament with a stunning 63.
The outspoken Hill, who has won here twice in the last three years, was seven under par on the short, 4,666-yard Colonial Country club course, which he calls his favorite on the tour.
"I'm going to petition to have 'em play every tournament on the tour on this course," the slim, dark, 33-year-old Hill said.
There's been only one lower score on the tour this year, a 61 by John Miller at Phoenix.
"It's the greens," said Hill, winner of three tournaments last year. "I just putt these greens so good."
He had seven birdies, an eagle and two bogeys, the latter when my favorite club, a six iron, spit at me a couple of times.
Hill, a 12-year veteran of the pro tour who came into his own last year when he won the Vardon Trophy and pulled down more than $150,000 in earnings, held a two-stroke lead over a trio headed by veteran Jack McGowan.
McGowan, a dour little 39-year-old veteran, was tied at 65 with rookie Randy Wolff and young Hale Irwin, who lost to Billy Casper in a playoff for the title in the Los Angeles Open earlier this year.
Casper, Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, and Gary Player are not competing.
The big group at 66 included Deane Beman, Grier Jones and Homero Blancas while Gene Littler, George Archer and Tom Shaw topped another big bunch at 67.
The course, one of the shortest the pros play, took a beating with almost half the field beating par.
But it snapped back at some of the top names. Lee Trevino managed only a 73 and must improve greatly to survive the cut when the field is trimmed to the low 70 scorers and ties for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.
British Open champion Tony Jacklin had a 71, while Frank Beard and U.S. Open titleholder Orville Moody matched par 70.

Irish And SIU In NCAA Field

COLUMBUS, Ohio — (AP) — Independents Notre Dame 17-14 and Southern Illinois 29-6 will join Mid-American Conference winner Ohio University and the Big Ten Conference king in the NCAA District 4 baseball tournament June 3-5.
If Ohio State wins one of two games at Michigan State Saturday, the Buckeyes will join the field and the tournament will be held here.
If the Buckeyes lose two, Minnesota would be the Big Ten winner and the district playoffs would be at Notre Dame.
The winner of the double elimination event advances to the College World Series June 13-20 at Omaha, Neb.

Hague And Allen Star In 9-2 Romp

NEW YORK (AP) — St. Louis knocked out Jim McAndrew in a four-run first inning Thursday and rode to a 9-2 victory behind Bob Gibson.
Joe Hague knocked in five runs for the Cardinals with a home run and three singles in the 13-hit attack against loser McAndrew. Don Cardwell, Cal Koonce and Tug McGraw, Vic Davalillo and Julian Javier walked to open the game and Rich Allen singled, scoring Davalillo. After Joe Torre walked, loading the bases, Cardwell replaced McAndrew. Hague singled scoring Javier and Allen. Torre scored while Ken Boswell was throwing out Mike Shannon.
Allen had a pair of doubles and a single for the Cards and Gibson weighed in with two singles while striking out 11. Hague's homer came in the eighth.

Dietz' Homer In Ninth Inning Tips Dodgers, 4-3

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dick Dietz walloped a homer in the ninth inning, sending San Francisco to a 4-3 victory over Los Angeles Thursday.
Dietz hit his homer over the leftfield wall off reliever Jim Brewer.
The Dodgers had tied the game in the top of the inning when Jim Leverage singled to drive in Willie Crawford, who had doubled.
The Giants had built the 3-2 margin on a solo homer by Bob Bonds and a two-run wallop by Ken Henderson off Don Sutton in the sixth inning.

Unbeaten Tiant Registers Sixth In 11-2 Runaway

ST. PAUL—MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Unbeaten Luis Tiant notched his sixth pitching victory and powered the Minnesota Twins to an 11-2 shelling of the Milwaukee Brewers Thursday with three singles and three runs batted in.
The lusty hitting Tiant, raising his 1970 average to .434, led a 16-hit Minnesota attack against five Brewer pitchers by stroking a four-run single in Minnesota's four-run second and a two-run blow in a four-run fourth.
Cesar Tovar drove in three more runs with his fifth homer in the third and George Mitterwald chased in two more with a single and double.
Every Minnesota starter, including Tony Oliva and Leo Cardenas who stretched hitting streaks to 13 games, hit safely. Milwaukee 000 010 100—2 11 0

Jacobs Enters Pair In Jersey Derby Saturday

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Trainer John Jacobs doesn't feel he's overworking Preakness winner Personality or stablemate High Echelon.
Jacobs has entered the pair in Saturday's $100,000 added Jersey Derby at Garden State Park, the sixth start in eight weeks for the prize 3-year-olds.
"They've held up very, very well," Jacobs said Thursday after Personality drew the No. 4 and High Echelon the No. 1 posts for the 1 1/4 mile Jersey.
"I haven't had any problems," Jacobs responded to a question on whether Personality and High Echelon weren't going to the post too often. The pair is slated for the Belmont Stakes June 6 in New York if they come out of the Jersey in good health.
"I only worry about Saturday," said Jacobs when asked if he wasn't concerned about the Belmont, third jewel in racing's triple crown for 3-year-olds.
"There is Sunday or Monday to worry about the Belmont," he said. So many things happen from day-to-day that you don't make any schedule for horses. They (horses) make the schedule. You go from Saturday to Saturday. If they're all right you run them. If not, you don't."
Jacobs ran Personality and High Echelon as an entry in the Wood Memorial, Gotham, Kentucky Derby and Preakness. They are paired for the Jersey, and will be for the Belmont. After that, Jacobs plans to split them. Personality probably will go to Chicago for the Classic and then to Hollywood Park while High Echelon is being pointed for the Leonard Richards at Delaware Park.
Others in the field are Hagley, Corn off the Cob, Silent Screen, Bold Day, Son Excellence and More Princely. Each will carry 126 pounds. If eight start, the gross value is $128,400, with $83,460 to the winner. The Personality-High Echelon entry is the 8-5 pre-race favorite, with Hagley second choice at 7-2, and Silent Screen third at 6-1.

Hickman's Hot Bat Gains 8-7 Victory

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Hickman's two-run homer in the ninth inning, his second of the game, gave the Chicago Cubs an 8-7 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Thursday.
Hickman's first two-run homer into the left field seats had tied the score at 6-6 in the seventh but the Pirates had recaptured the lead in the eighth on Matty Alou's single following a wild throw by Hank Aguirre, third Cub pitcher.
Billy Williams singled with one out in the bottom of the ninth off Gene Garber and Hickman followed with his 10th homer of the season into the left field bleachers. Hickman has hit five home runs in the last six games.
Cleo James of Chicago hit his first major league homer in the sixth inning of a see-saw game in which the Cubs came from behind three times to win. Bob Robertson homered for the Pirates in the sixth after starter Bill Hands hit Al Oliver with a pitch.

Baltimore's Fans Not Storming Gate

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles are threatening to make a runaway of the American League's Eastern Division pennant race but local fans aren't storming the gates of Memorial Stadium.
So, what else is new in Baltimore?
The Orioles open a nine-game road trip against the California Angels Friday night with statistics amazingly similar to 1969, when they won the division title by 19 games:
—their won-lost record of 32-13 is identical to last season's pace after the same number of games.
—the turnstile count after 22 home games is 231,769, or just 698 above last year.
The Orioles edged above the one million mark for home attendance last season on the final contest in Memorial Stadium, reaching 1,000,811.
"I'm not crying about the attendance," said Jerold C. Hoffberger, the Orioles' board chairman. "First off, you can't compare two seasons because of different teams in on different dates, a difference in the weather, and other factors."
"All I know is that the Orioles are playing great baseball — they're the most exciting team in the majors — and the people of Baltimore will want to come out and see them. We'll be ahead of last year's attendance before the year is out."
The Orioles last season were the only team in the league to use the turnstile count, rather than the actual number of tickets sold. This season, they are releasing the ticket sale figure at the request of the league, but also continue to provide the turnstile count.

Wheeling It Road Racing Debuts In South

By BOB COCHNAR
ATLANTA, Ga. — (NEA) — There have been rumblings from deep in the red clay heart of Dixie that a Grand Prix-type road racing circuit was under construction. This is, in the kingdom of stock cars, a kind of heresy.
Racing Southern-style, the experts tell themselves, means big old Fords and Chevies and Plymouths wrapping around county-fair bull rings and super-speedways. It certainly does not mean fancy sports cars driven by foreigners.
Such grand traditions have not impressed David Sloyer and Earl Walker who, possessed with the chutzpah of a thief who complains to Ralph Nader that the goods he filched are defective, have thrown caution to the winds and are happily building Road Atlanta on 380 acres of pine-studded foothills 40 miles northeast of Atlanta.
The two Lockheed-Georgia engineers figured that the South is a good deal more sophisticated than the myths would suggest and would, in fact, support what will be the only true road racing circuit below the Mason-Dixon Line. The first race, an SCCA national championship, is scheduled for August 23.
"All we had when we decided to do this thing," Sloyer recalls, "was $7,100 and a lot of enthusiasm. This was enough to make a down payment of property near Atlanta." Seed money from friends kept the enterprise alive until an intrastate stock issue was offered.
Hardly enough cash trickled in from the highly speculative issue to insure completion of the $1 million facility. But Sloyer and Walker decided to begin construction anyway.
"Well," Walker explains, "it didn't quite work out. Before we really got started, a group of local farmers slapped an injunction on the operation and we found ourselves in court."
The arguments against the facility were loud, if not logical. Noise from the track would stampede cattle and interfere with church services, it was said. Fallout from exhausts would poison the crops, tire dust and oil would pollute the streams. Noting the look of firm resolve in the eyes of the vigilantes, Walker and Sloyer capitulated and, in the process, lost $40,000.
Anybody else might have given up but since the two were engineers (who are notably hard-headed) they gave the project one more try.
After locating another site, the two promoters first sold the local community on the notion. But there wasn't enough money to build; surveying, engineering and blueprinting had wiped out the small cash reserve. "We decided to begin construction anyway," says Sloyer, "hoping that some angel would see some profitable future in our project." The angel, incredibly, was found. He turned out to be a prominent Georgia financier who put together some $700,000.
The full impact of Road Atlanta hasn't yet struck Southern racing fans. The 2.7 mile circuit, which winds around a grassy hill, will provide a suitable stage in the South for SCCA's popular professional series—the Can-Am, Trans-Am and Continental.
The complex includes a four-story tower and press center and four permanent concession-stand comfort stations. There are no grandstands to mar the slopes overlooking the circuit. Spectators will simply plunk down on soft Kentucky fescue grass and take it all in, picnic-style.
While there's no guarantee Road Atlanta will get professional races, without which the circuit is likely to be in deep trouble again, Can-Am and Trans-Am dates in the fall which currently belong to California's Sears Point Raceway, may become available.
The dates may be free because Sears Point recently closed down operations, claiming financial woes. It's a situation which the Road Atlanta entrepreneurs are approaching with mixed emotions.

Orr Sparks Final IC Diamond Figures

Rich Orr, freshman from Perry, was the standout this year on the Illinois College varsity baseball team, as he turned in a home-run record which last week gained him the number one spot in the nation, according to the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. Through 17 games he had slammed out eight round-trippers for a 0.47 per-game average, leading Terry Alexa of Stout State University in Wisconsin who had a 0.43 average.

Orr in last week's N.A.I.A. report also tied for fifth spot in the nation for runs-batted-in. He had 24 RBI's in 17 games for an average of 1.41 per outting.

Richard R. Orr is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Orr of Perry. He was graduated from Perry High school a year ago, where he played basketball and baseball all four years; he also was sports editor for the newspaper, and he was active in band, track, chorus, dramatic club, and student council.

At the College he is a member of Pi Pi Rho literary society.

I.C. coach Joe Brooks says that Orr probably will be named to the all-conference baseball team of the Prairie College Conference. He was voted "most valuable player" by his teammates.

For the season, Orr won the I.C. batting title with a .365 batting average.

Brooks says that only three seniors are graduating this year from the team, and that "this is a young team — I feel that they will be greatly improved next year."

For the season's 20 games, the baseball Blueboys finished with a record of 5 wins, 14 losses, and 1 tie. A 6-6 tie game with the P.C.C. conference champion, Greenville College, was called at the end of 11 innings because of darkness.

Kent Wildrick, sophomore from Carthage, Ill., was the season's leading pitcher and pitched the five winning games. Because of a sore arm, he was unable to take part in the last eight games.

The 1970 baseball co-captains were seniors Tom Murgatroyd from Jacksonville and Jim Jenkins of Waukegan.

Those Butterflies

By TOM SEAVER

During the baseball season, I am always calm and cool, never nervous or anxious—except every fourth day. I used to be very jumpy on days I pitched. I'm a little better now.

I remember one of my first games in professional baseball. I was with Jacksonville then, 1966. We were playing at Columbus, which had the first-place team. I was in the bullpen when the National Anthem was begun. About halfway through I bent over and threw up and then straightened up as they finished the song.

The next year I was in the big leagues. On our first road trip we went into St. Louis. The Cardinals at that time had seven .300 hitters in the lineup. That's all, just seven. And the night before I was scheduled to pitch against him, my roommate then, Don Shaw, lovable Don Shaw, began to read off the averages of their hitters.

I practically screamed myself to sleep.

In the first two innings, they scored four runs off me on something like three hits and five walks. I couldn't go out to the mound for the third inning. I couldn't bend my stomach.

So I was taken out of the game and went into the clubhouse, where the Cardinals' doctor put me on the training table. He poked around my stomach and then he abruptly pushed down and I leaped off the table in pain.

He diagnosed my problem as a spasm of the colon. The colon is one of the links with the intestines, and it was knotted like a piece of rope.

"Nothing wrong," the doctor told me. "You're just nervous. You'll be fine tomorrow." I went on to win 16 games that season, despite my dear friend Shaw and his horror stories.

And so I have found out that I have to control my emotions, or I'm just not any good. The last time I felt similar anxieties was before the first play-off game against Atlanta last season. The Braves scored five runs off me in six innings, and I was very wild, was rushing my motion and gave up homers to Henry Aaron, Orlando Cepeda and Tony Gonzales.

Funny thing, though, before both my World Series starts I felt rather relaxed. I lost the first game but won the other. But it is true that most pitchers are probably more nervous before big games or before facing tougher teams, than they are on other occasions. Yet I never consciously let down. I consider pitching against the Expos, for example, as important as pitching against the Cubs. And I feel I have an obligation to do as well as I can, not only to myself, but to my teammates and the fans.

But it is natural to feel different before pressure games. And I'm not alone in that. Jerry Koosman, for example, came down an elevator with his roommate, Ron Taylor, before he was to pitch a big game against Pittsburgh last September. Jerry was saying that he sat around all day worrying about how he was going to do.

He asked Taylor, a veteran pitcher, if the pressure was getting to him, if it was a lack of confidence? No, said Ron, it was just Jerry's way of getting just for the game. And that if he wasn't hung up he would probably be overconfident.

Two days before I pitch, I try to get 12 hours sleep. The night before I pitch, I try to get about nine hours sleep—I don't want to overdo it and be loggy. I first realized the importance of sleep when I was at Southern Cal, and my friend Mike Garrett, the football player now with the Kansas City chiefs, said there is no replacement for sleep for an athlete.

I also try to eat lightly on a day of a game. For breakfast, it's usually orange juice, a couple eggs, maybe a piece of bacon. For lunch, a grilled cheese sandwich or a cheeseburger, a cereal or a fruit salad. But no matter what I eat on the day I'm pitching, and no matter who the opponent, it's tough to get food down.

IT PROBABLY WON'T CATCH ON among tennis players who don't move on administration courts, but Peace Corps Director Joseph Blatchford had good reason for the unorthodox headgear recently. He donned the crash helmet after being zonked by a celebrated but erratic vice-presidential serve.

Pollard Expects To Be First Grandfather To Win Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Art Pollard, a 43-year-old late-comer to big time auto racing, said Thursday he expects to become the first grandfather to win the $25,000 Indianapolis 500-mile auto race.

Marking time in his garage 48 hours before the start of the race, Pollard said:

"Most other athletes lose their desire to compete, to win, after they reach 40. There are the Hogans and the Sneads in golf, who can still hit a ball out of sight, but fall off in their putting. They may not have lost the desire but they certainly are no longer competitive with the young lions of their sport."

"I haven't reached that point yet; in fact, I feel I'm just rearing my prime. I have more desire now than when I got into a race car the first time in 1955, when the Hogans and the Sneads were at the top."

"And for goodness sakes, there is a heck of a lot of difference in driving a race car and hitting a golf ball."

The former modified stock car champion from Medford, Ore., is unlike most of the 33 starters in the 54th Indianapolis 500 lineup: aside from his age, he is part owner of the firm that pays the bill for his racing operation.

Pollard's cars are sponsored by a firm that franchises car wash systems bearing his name.

"Our operation on USCA's championship trail this year will cost about $400,000," Pollard said. "So we'd have to win two races the size of Indianapolis just to pay the bills."

Pollard brought three new cars designed by veteran mechanic Grant King to Indianapolis. The husky 200-pounder qualified one car on the outside of the second row at 168.595 miles per hour.

Greg Weld, 26-year-old rookie from Kansas City, Mo., put the other car in 28th starting position at 165.121 m.p.h. The third machine, powered like the others by a turbocharged Offenhauser engine, was held in reserve.

Pollard, who is making only his third start at Indy, figures there are 10 drivers that rate about an equal chance of winning.

In addition to himself, he lists front-row starters Al Unser, A.J. Foyt, and Johnny Rutherford; his own second-row mates, Roger McCluskey and Mark Donohue; 1968 winner Bobby Unser and 1969 champion Mario Andretti. Lloyd Ruby, who starts in 25th position, and Jack Brabham, who starts in 26th place.

Special Jury Requested For Panther Case

CHICAGO (AP)—The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) and two organizations representing lawyers and businessmen requested Thursday that a special prosecutor and grand jury be appointed to investigate a police raid in which two Black Panther leaders were slain.

The petition to the Circuit Court said a recent federal grand jury report which criticized the Cook County (Chicago) state's attorney's office and the Chicago Police Department for their handling and investigation of the raid showed the law enforcement agencies committed "numerous violations of Illinois criminal law."

It asked that a special prosecutor determine whether indictments should be brought against members of the police department and state's attorney's office.

The petition asserted that the federal grand jury report on the Dec. 4 weapons raid in which Fred Hampton and Mark Clark were killed uncovered numerous irregularities.

"Such indications should be dealt with by a special grand jury and a special state's attorney," it declared, "lest the inference be drawn by the public that cover-ups of official wrongdoing are tolerated by the judicial and law enforcement officials of our community."

The ACLU was joined in the petition by the Chicago Council of Lawyers and a group called Businessmen in the Public Interest.

Collective Bargaining Is Best Avenue: Kuhn

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn testified in Federal Court Thursday that collective bargaining between players and owners was the best way to affect changes in the game's reserve system.

Kuhn, under cross examination by Jay Topkis, one of Curt Flood's attorneys, said compulsory arbitration of salary disputes would not be fatal to baseball.

The seventh day of the trial in Flood's $3 million antitrust suit against baseball was given over to the cross examination of Kuhn, first defense witness. The trial will be resumed Monday after a weekend holiday recess. Charles "Chub" Feeney, president of the National League, is the next scheduled witness.

Flood, former St. Louis Cardinal center fielder who refused to accept his trade to the Philadelphia Phillies last winter, is challenging the reserve system by which a player is bound to a club for life by an annual option to renew his contract.

The commissioner maintained the reserve system is an evolving system with many changes over the years and more to be expected in the future.

Asked if baseball could survive if owners and players should agree to free all players after five years to bargain for their services, Kuhn said the question was hypothetical and added, "I do not anticipate any such result."

Kuhn repeated earlier objections to pro football's play-out-the-option system as "very damaging" because of the possibility of tampering.

When Topkis asked Kuhn why he should expect tampering in baseball and not football, he said:

Pitching and tight defense were the keys in Elks Little League activity Thursday evening.

Chris Keller fired a no-hitter, striking out 12 batters, as the Orioles blanked the Red Sox. Bob Manker whiffed 11 Orioles in the losing cause, with Jay Dickman collecting two of the five hits off Manker.

The Cardinals shaded the Braves 2-1 with Dave Stevens and Jon Huston besting Mike Smith in another pitching duel. All the runs scored in the fifth inning.

"It is inevitable that any system such as professional football uses has the danger of tampering. I want baseball to be free of any damage."

Kuhn added he had no reason to doubt the integrity of the people in pro football but the option rule raises the question of tampering.

Although Kuhn said compulsory salary arbitration would not be fatal to baseball, he testified it would create a gulf in player-owner relations.

Murray Olderman NEA Executive Editor

NEW YORK (NEA) — Sports is no longer the cloistered world of sweat it was way back in the dim past of, say, six or even five years ago.

Once, the fresh-faced, gape-mouthed aspirant to a job as sportswriter was grilled on his knowledge of such phrases as "the hot corner," "the gridiron," "cagers" and "runs like a gazelle."

The change is reflected in what sports editors expect of job applicants nowadays. Witness a recent interview we were privy to.

"Son," said this typical hard-bitten sports editor, "to be a sportswriter in the 1970s, you must be conversant with the following phrases. Ready?"

"Right on," said the youthful applicant, whose name happened to be Allie Mode.

"O.K. What's a 'court'?" asked the editor.

"Once also known as the 'hardwood' but now a place where people like Curt Flood and umpires like Bill Valentine and Al Salerno, and NBA player representatives opposing a merger with the ABA, and a boxer like Cassius Clay suit up," replied the young man.

"Reserve."

"Formerly meant 'substitute.' Now it means 'slave,' as in 'slave clause.'"

"Strike."

"Something baseball players threaten if... if..."

"Go on, go on—I think you're in the right direction."

"If the owners balk in rejecting players' demands for shorter schedule, better pension plan and so forth."

"Balk! Perfect usage. What about 'The Bomb'?"

"Archaic for long pass in football. Now, the threat of which clears out whole stadiums while demolition experts determine where it is hidden or whether it was a hoax."

"Circuit blow."

"In olden days, cliché for home run. But now—what will happen to Clay if his appeal fails in New Orleans."

"Commercial."

"Once associated with beer, Now, Alpine skiing, ice hockey, soccer, basketball, boxing and figure skating, as defined by Avery Brundage."

"Guard."

"At one time, it designated positions in football and basketball. Now, something athletes fret over when there is a postal strike: (Vide: Mike Riordan and Cazzie Russell of the Knicks) or campus unrest (check with Leroy Kelly of the Browns)."

"Protest."

"Once synonymous with 'rhubarb.' But that's ancient. Today, it is an outlet for an athlete's convictions on foreign and domestic issues."

"Quarterback option."

"What Joe Kapp of the Vikings has just played out of."

"Race."

"Years ago, it was something people associated with Paavo Nurmi, Jesse Owens, Roger Bannister, Jim Ryun and other antediluvians. But it's so obvious. Must I go on?"

"Of course not. You've done fine. You have a superior working knowledge of most of the current sporting terms. But it is not enough to be 'engage' and with it and able to read and interpret Supreme Court decisions; the modern sportswriter must also know what a 'sentence' is."

"A sentence, sir, is, and I quote from memory, 'a unit of speech consisting of a meaningful arrangement of words, or merely a word, that expresses an assertion, a question, a command, a wish, or an exclamation, and typically containing a subject or a predicate, or only a predicate.'"

"Sorry. But in this age a sentence is something from which Cassius Clay is seeking a reversal. Try us next year, kid."

Four hearts down one is a perfectly normal result. North certainly has a raise to two hearts and South is fully justified in jumping to game, but with normal defense South winds up losing three spades and a club.

In a recent, rather tough, duplicate, two South players went down two tricks and one made his contract.

It is rather easy to see how down-two came about. West opened the deuce of clubs. East took his ace and returned the suit. South was in with the king and drew trumps with two leads. Then South, an expert, decided that the best play for his contract would be to lead a diamond toward dummy and finesse the jack.

Assuming that finesse to work, he would be able to shed one of dummy's spades on the king of diamonds and get out with the loss of only two spades. So he took the finesse. East won the trick and shifted to either the jack or ace of spades. In either case, the defense got three quick spade tricks.

How did one declarer make his contract? Was he a great expert? No, he was lucky.

It seems that West was one of those fancy players who are always trying to work out some sensational play. This West led the eight of spades. South played low from dummy and now East went into conference with himself. That eight-spot lead looked like the top of a doubleton. Maybe West held ace and one trump for that lead. East played the ten of spades.

South looked startled for a moment. Then he gathered in the trick with his queen and proceeded to make his contract for a real top score.

Scientists Trying To Dig Up Bones Of History's Biggest Dinosaurs

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associated Press Writer
SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Scientific sleuths are trying to dig up the bones of one of history's biggest dinosaurs.

They are exploring the Zambezi River Valley to try to discover if the monster brachiosaurus roamed Rhodesia's primeval swamps. The brachiosaurus was about 75 feet long, weighed some 50 tons and stood as tall as a two-story building.

Fossilized remains discovered about five years ago by a zoologist from Rhodesia's Tsetse Fly Department started the scientific detective work. Other fragments found in the valley later were pieced together, but nobody is certain what kind of beast they are from.

The largest fragment is a piece of femur estimated to be one-third of the original full length from hip to knee.

"This piece is 25 inches long and 10 inches wide—more than twice the size of dinosaur remains recently found at Kariba," said Mike Raath, curator of Salisbury's Queen Victoria Museum and leader of the current expedition.

"But we have not yet identified the species to which the bone belongs. . . . Questions hang over everything," he said. "All we can say now is that basically we know what the shape and size of the beast must have been from the fossils already discovered. But we don't have enough scientific evidence yet to identify it.

"But there is no doubt that the bones already in our possession are the remains of the biggest prehistoric animal yet discovered in Rhodesia."

Raath suggests that if the bones can be pinned down as brachiosaurus it could help support the theory that a land bridge once connected Africa and South America.

"They might prove that in Rhodesia we had some of the largest animals that ever walked the earth. Brachiosaurus remains are, so far, known only in North America and East Africa. So it is possible there might have been some kind of land bridge for these animals to cross over from America to Africa."

Raath thinks the monsters might have travelled from East Africa through what are now Zambia and Malawi into Rhodesia along a system of connected lakes and waterways in the Luangwa and Zambezi valleys. The Zambezi River is the frontier between Rhodesia and Zambia.

Raath says the earliest dinosaurs, which lived about 200 million years ago, were relatively small.

"The giant species evolved much later and died out about 70 million years ago, 68 million years before the first signs of ape men appeared on earth. Among these giants was the brachiosaurus, which was herbivorous and lived in swampy, hot areas."

A reconstructed skeleton of one of the monsters, found in Tanzania early this century, now stands in the Berlin Natural History Museum.

WHERE TO WRITE ABOUT REFUNDS FROM STATE TAX

SPRINGFIELD — Jay G. Philpott, District director of Internal Revenue for Central and Southern Illinois, said that taxpayers expecting state income tax refunds should contact the Department of Revenue, State of Illinois, and not an IRS office.

Mr. Philpott pointed out that although space was made available for state personnel at most IRS offices in the Springfield District during this year's filing period, this was only a temporary arrangement that ended on April 15, the deadline for filing Federal and State income tax returns.

Information about delayed state refunds may be obtained by calling 312-641-2150 or by writing to the Illinois Income Tax Processing Center, P.O. Box 3747, Springfield, Illinois 62708.

Philpott added, "If you're expecting a Federal income tax refund and more than ten weeks have passed since the return was filed, you may call your local IRS office on a day designated by that office as a service day. Or, if you prefer, you may call 217-525-4380 or visit the District office at 325 West Adams street in Springfield. A follow-up of the status of the expected Federal refund will be made by IRS personnel and you will be informed as soon as possible."

ROODHOUSE CLUB SPENDS DAY IN STATE CAPITOL

ROODHOUSE — Twenty-four members and guests of the Roodhouse Woman's club left Friday morning, May 15, by the Lyndie McCallister chartered bus to spend a day in Springfield.

The visit included a tour of the restored old State Capitol, now a state memorial, and the present State Capitol building. The group attended the Con-Con meeting in the old State Capitol and were taken on a tour by Don Liggett, who served as their guide. They received recognition from the Con-Con group.

Dinner was enjoyed at the Heritage House and in the bus an unusual installation of officers, including Mrs. Harvey Hodge, president, was conducted by Mrs. Vivian Wollermann.

Members taking the trip included Mrs. Elizabeth Allman, Mrs. Helen Bartlett, Mrs. Eva Blundy, Mrs. Ruby Denny, Mrs. Lyla Hodge, Mrs. Anna Roe, Miss Ardath Short, Mrs. Eileen Spencer, Mrs. Mildred Spencer, Mrs. Verna B. Taylor.

Mrs. Lucille Wallace, Mrs. Bertha Welch, Mrs. Vivian Wollermann, Roodhouse; Miss Ethel Culbertson, Mrs. Emma Lorton, Miss Alice Shepard, Mrs. Helen Bartlett, Mrs. Eva Blundy, Mrs. Ruby Denny, Mrs. Lyla Hodge, Mrs. Anna Roe, Miss Ardath Short, Mrs. Eileen Spencer, Mrs. Mildred Spencer, Mrs. Verna B. Taylor.

Arranging the trip were the following Woman's club members: Miss Rella Backus, Miss Ardath Short, and Mrs. Jessie Short; and making the Springfield tours possible were Representatives Thomas Rose, Jacksonville, and Jerry Corbett, Hardin. Pictures were taken of the visitors on the State Capitol steps.

Women's Divine Rights Do Not Include Alimony

By ARLEEN ABRAHAM

Associated Press Writer

John S. Rodell proudly admits that his three bouts with the divorce court have ended in "two wins and a draw." But despite the fact that he has managed to survive three divorces without paying alimony (the draw involved a cash settlement), he adamantly says, "When it comes to a contested marital action, the man is behind the eight-ball from the very beginning."

The author, playwright and former Hollywood screenwriter recalled the temporary alimony hearing held in his last, and only bitterly contested, divorce suit as being symbolic of what man faces in his fight for freedom. "You are completely on the defensive, not only with the opposition but even with your own attorney."

"Lawyers have been so brainwashed by the mystique of the situation, they simply go along with the system and assume the men are going to lose," continued the author of "How to Avoid Alimony: A Survival Kit for Husbands." The attorneys, the courts, and the typical woman refuse to realize that alimony is not a divine right and privilege of marriage.

Perhaps because Rodell served as a special agent in security and counter-intelligence for the Army during World War II, he views unwarranted alimony as the military does the enemy: conquer or be wiped out. "I'm not interested in any alimony reform movements. If you accept the premise of alimony at all, you're dead," says the bearded writer.

Although he contends he is not opposed to child support, Rodell is vehemently opposed to money provided as child support that turns into hidden alimony. "Generally, women aren't held to account for the money they get for child support, and so something which starts out as perfectly legitimate turns out to be a hidden form of alimony," he claims. Colleen, his attractive blonde fourth wife, 20 years his junior, nodded in agreement.

A firm believer in marriage — "I've only been unmarried two weeks out of the past 30 years"—Rodell believes women have the best of the marriage bargain—especially when it comes to divorce.

"I'm accused of being unfair to women," he says. "I may be unfair but I'm writing from the man's point of view. And it's about time. The codes of marriage and divorce have been written from the women's point of view for 3,000 odd years."

He says his book is written to stiffen men's spines and make men less chivalrous. Less chivalrous? "Men are stuck with this little gentleman complex. And any man who acts the role of little gentleman in a divorce action darn well deserves what he gets."

Instead, Rodell urges a man who wants to emerge on top in a marital action to take the offensive. "Sue first if you possibly can," he advises. "Getting in the first licks is extremely important psychologically."

The importance of an aggressive lawyer is not to be underestimated. "You are at the mercy of your lawyer. I spent so much time pushing my lawyer. If you can't find a fighting lawyer, find another one. Don't let anyone push you into anything. If you refuse to be put on the defensive, chances are you'll at least wind up in a draw." And, considering the odds stacked against a man, he claims that's nearly a victory.

Currently at work on his next book and completing a play, Rodell lives in Roanoke, Va., with his present wife and one son. The son and a daughter, now 21, both from his third marriage, chose to live with him when his marriage broke up.

Too big for bathtub, until she lost 74 lbs.

At 195 pounds, Jean Hunter of Marietta, Georgia found the bathtub, in the trailer where she lived, a tight squeeze.

Jean had always been fat. She weighed 12 pounds at birth, 180 pounds in eighth grade. As an adult, she decided to join the Navy. But she had to lose 40 pounds to be accepted. After reducing pills, liquids, and finally a crazy baloney and dry bread diet, she reduced enough for the Navy to take her. But then she married and her weight went right up again—to 195 pounds. She was desperate, trying to find a way to reduce. Finally she heard Arthur Godfrey talk about Ayds Reducing Plan Candy, that contains no harmful drugs. She bought some. Taken as directed, Ayds curbs your appetite, so you automatically eat less and lose weight. On the Ayds Plan, Jean lost 74 pounds. Try it. Chewy vanilla caramel Ayds, chocolate fudge type and fudgy chocolate mint.

Double Talk Useful For Saving Face

By HAL BOYLE
 NEW YORK (AP) — Heard any good new double talk lately?

Double talk, you remember, is saying one thing while thinking another. It is a device for saving your public face while remaining privately honest with yourself.

For the benefit of the uninitiated, here are some typical examples of modern day double talk:

"Frankly, I like the dress, but somehow it doesn't bring out the real me."—I saw the price tag.

"I really enjoy living alone, Melvin, but now and then I get swept by a feeling of unutterable loneliness. Don't you sometimes feel that way, too?"—What did I do wrong as a little girl so that now, at 28, I have to try to get a jerk like Melvin to propose to me?

"Naturally, every man has a right to express his own opinion."—So why don't you write yours on a piece of paper, put it in a bottle, and float it out to sea?

"The reason I asked you to baby sit for us, Melinda, is that everyone in the neighborhood brags about what a trustworthy and responsible girl you are for your age."—Please don't teach our child to smoke pot while we're gone—she's only 3.

"Well, I guess I will have just one more if you promise to make it a real teensy-weensy one."—But you don't have to pour it from an eyedropper, like you did the other two.

"I can't wait for the beach season to start, Gloria, so I can see how you'll look in that new bikini."—But maybe we could tie it on a broomstick right now and get a good idea.

"Yeah, since I started taking exercises regularly, I can now touch my toes 50 times without—" Without getting out of bed.

"Now, Jim, why did you have to go and do that? You know I insisted we were going to go Dutch!"—Boy, that was close. The big bum almost let me pay for my own meal.

"I'm happy to tell you, Mr. Brownbaum, that your first series of X-rays were completely negative." My technician goofed. Now we'll take some more and find out what's actually wrong with you.

"Normally, of course, I wouldn't be caught dead going to a dirty movie, but according to the critics this one has some redeeming features."—It's real dirty.

"That sounds like pure malicious gossip about Sylvia. How can you believe a word of it?"—I always knew she was a tramp. Tell me more.

"Your word alone is always good enough for me, Frank."—But let's put it in writing and have it notarized, shall we, old pal?

Coat Hangers Make Rack For Pans, Cookie Sheets

By POLLY CRAMER
 DEAR POLLY—File those untidy, inconvenient stacks of cookie sheets and baking pans in a rack that can be easily made with wire coat hangers. You will need four hangers, nine short lengths of flexible wire (such as plastic-covered wire ties from bread wrappers) and pliers.

Grasp a hanger in both hands, one hand holding the middle of the bottom and the other holding the top near the hook. Pull the hanger into a long diamond shape. Measure 1½ inches in each direction from the two center corners and bend the sides up at right angles. Repeat on all hangers.

Next place two of the bent hangers together so the sides resemble upside-down Vs meeting. Securely wrap them together, using wire at the top point and the two bottom corners. Join the third hanger in the same way, then the fourth. Your rack is ready for use. This same basic rack could serve for many things, such as storing records up-right, filing dress patterns or holding paperback books.—ELLEN

Polly's Problem
 DEAR POLLY—I have three sets of plastic bowls in various sizes and sometimes spend ten minutes looking for the right lid for a certain bowl. I would like some ideas on how to keep such lids in order and where they can be easily located. I would also like to know how to clean lampshades that have a clothlike covering but the finish is not smooth. Wiping with a damp cloth does not get them clean.—MRS. D.H.

Senate Approves $7.5 Million For Election Costs

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois Senate Wednesday approved a $7.5 million appropriation for expenses of the upcoming referendum on a new state constitution.

The Constitutional Convention has not set a date for the election on the new document now being drafted.

The Senate also approved a bill appropriating $102.5 million for the Department of Revenue. About 90 per cent of the money will go for cities and counties shares of state tax revenue.

By a vote of 43 to 3, the Senate approved a bill appropriating $3.5 million for the operation of the 1971 state fair.

The fate of the annual exposition had come under question this session of the legislature after former state fair manager Franklin Rust was indicted for alleged irregularities in concession contracts.

Three other persons were indicted with Rust. Some legislators had urged the abolishment of the fair.

In other developments, Sen. W. Russell Arrington of Evansville killed a bill to shorten the Illinois income tax form from four pages to one and also give a tax break to retired persons living on fixed income.

In addition, the legislation would exempt any gain on the sale of an individual residence and exclude from the income tax all interest earned on state and local governmental bonds.

Arrington withdrew the bill after the Senate several weeks ago eliminated one of the key provisions he proposed.

Under the existing law an individual must determine his capital assets as of Aug. 1, 1969, and is taxed on any gain realized after that date on the sale of his holdings.

The bill provided for removal of the Aug. 1 date, which would have made capital gains subject to tax back to the time that the stocks or bonds or other capital assets were acquired.

'Outside Crew' Gets New General Foreman

Mayor Dan F. Lahey announced Thursday morning that he had requested Utilities Line Construction Co., holders of a contract to provide repair and maintenance of all city electric utility lines, to provide one general foreman to serve as liaison between Supt. Robert Jameson and the electric department's line crew.

Don Anderson has been named as "general foreman" for the job according to Lahey. Anderson said the "outside crew" in the employ of Utilities Line Construction Co. would not change. That crew, composed of four ex-city linemen will continue to be employed, although Anderson will serve as the fifth member of the operation serving as general foreman.

Lahey still refused to comment concerning his trip to Chicago which he described as "productive" upon his return a week ago. At that time, Lahey talked with union authorities about the city's dispute with Local 51, IBEW, and nine ex-city linemen. The dispute has been in progress since April 22 but has not been solved.

One union official was scheduled to discuss what happened at the "Chicago meeting" Wednesday afternoon, although members of the news media waited in vain for his appearance.

Upon his return from Chicago, Jacksonville Mayor Dan Lahey said he would not make a public comment until after the aldermen had been advised of the content of the meeting. Lahey did not call a special meeting of the aldermen until after last Monday's council session.

That meeting was closed to all news media.

The difficulty reached public attention when nine linemen started a "sick-out" on the afternoon of April 22. All nine left their jobs after calling the utility office and telling personnel there they were "sick."

The city made plans on April 27 to hire an outside firm to handle repair and maintenance of city lines. On May 4, a contract with Ingram Electric of Jacksonville was approved by the city council for repair and maintenance of all city utility lines.

Illinois House

Adds To Mental Health Budget

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois House added $7.4 million to the state mental health budget Wednesday and then advanced it to passage stage.

With the addition, the budget total rose to $283.2 million for the fiscal year beginning July 1. It is up $23.6 million from the amount Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie originally proposed.

With Ogilvie's approval, Rep. Thomas Houde, R-Kankakee, offered an amendment which increases mental health employee salaries 6 per cent beginning Sept. 1. The amendment was adopted unanimously.

It will cost an extra $4.8 million over a salary hike previously submitted in the budget.

Rep. Paul Elward, D-Chicago, also won adoption of an amendment increasing the amount for community mental health centers by $1.6 million and that for day care centers by $1 million.

Under criticism from mental health groups and Democratic legislators, Ogilvie several weeks ago agreed to a $16.2 million budget boost.

Elward sought and failed with another amendment to increase the budget a total of $23 million. His amendment lost by three votes.

In other action, the House overwhelmingly defeated an attempt by Rep. Anthony Scariano, D-Park Forest, to put the Illinois Crime Investigating Commission out of business by killing its $245,000 appropriation.

Scariano charged the commission "has not lived up to its purpose of ferreting out links between crime and politics."

"Organized crime couldn't exist five days without links to politics," Scariano said.

House members defended the commission but adopted an amendment to change its makeup by removing the four public members appointed by the governor, leaving it composed of 12 legislators.

The House passed the record high $865 million annual budget for the Illinois Public Aid Department and returned it to the Senate for concurrence in amendments.

One of the changes made by the House removed a Senate provision limiting monthly payments to any one family to $560.

The other amendment granted department employees a 6 per cent salary increase, which other department employees also are getting.

By a vote of 161 to 3, the House passed a $750 million bond issue recommended by Ogilvie to aid local sewage treatment improvements. The plan is subject to referendum approval in the November election.

Under the provisions, federal funds would supply one-third of the improvement costs, the state one-third and the balance paid by local governments.
